Windfall!

Most say they won't 'splurge'

SHARON GILES

IRWIN KURZIN

A Herald staff report

Conservative and thrifty, the people of the Northwest suburbs will spend their government rebate checks, coming this week, on their homes, their children and ways to save for a rainy day.

A sidewalk poll of Northwest suburbanites Friday reveals that far from pouring rebate money into "big-ticket" items such as cars, most people will take their rebate check and use it quietly. Some said they would use their rebate money on home improvements or a vacation. Others said they would try to save the government windfall.

At least most people said that was their plan. One man, Charles Keagy of Rolling Meadows, says he expects to get $100 back in his rebate and will "double the money playing poker."

THE FIRST BATCH of rebate checks, ranging from $100 to $200 for most taxpayers, went into the mail Thursday in the Chicago area. The Internal Revenue Service said the rebates would be sent on a "first-come, first-served" basis, the first set going to people who filed tax returns by Feb. 13. People expecting a refund from the IRS will get it in a separate check.

"We just bought a house. So we can use the rebate for paint, carpeting and everything," said Paula Springer of Arlington Heights.

Mrs. William Schwenk of Palatine also plans to use the extra money on the house. "We've got to paint the house this year and do some other things around here that we had to let go because we couldn't afford it," she said.

ANN NOWICKI of Wheeling said she will use the rebate to help her son buy a house. Sharon Giles of Schaumburg said she will spend it on air conditioning. Sharon Jacoby of Des Plaines will fence-in her backyard with the rebate and Mrs. Robert Munson of Elk Grove Village said she'll use it to put a roof over a balcony.

Mrs. John Pawley of Elk Grove Village will put the money towards sails for her sailboat. Thomas Rentoules of Des Plaines will use the money for extra spending on a summer trip to Greece.

Other people like Irwin Kurzin of

BARBARA BUEDEL

Wheeling said they were going to spend the money but didn't know on what. "We'll spend it, though, and get the economy going," he said.

Barbara Buedel of Wood Dale said she had already spent the money even though she hasn't gotten the check in the mail yet.

GOVERNMENT officials hope people will funnel their rebates back into the economy by buying consumer goods instead of using the money for bills and savings, but not everyone intends to oblige.

"We'll just save it," said Bruce Thill of Mount Prospect. "The rebate may help the economy some but for the individual it won't mean much. You can't do that much with $100 to $200 these days."

Mrs. John Wetzel of Elk Grove Village said she is depending on the rebate check to buy plants and seeds for her vegetable garden so she can feed her family for the rest of the year.

KEN KLEIN of Arlington Heights plans to pay his dentist bill with his rebate and Don Cerny of Schaumburg said he will use the extra money for

"CHIEF BILL" RITTER

'Once a chief, always
a chief?' Well, ask Bill

Crossing guard, 74, getting a new
'birthday star' from Buffalo Grove

by JILL BETTNER

Chief Ritter, put your stars back on. Have your best uniform cleaned and pressed. After more than 30 years of volunteer duty, you're finally going to get a real policeman's star from the Village of Buffalo Grove just in time for your 74th birthday.

Won't the kids be proud — all those boys and girls who run to see you very day at your crossing guard's post under the old hickory tree across from Buffalo Grove High School?

They know Ritter as "Bill" or "Mr. Ritter," the guy who always seems to be cheerful even on the gloomiest old days, who loves to joke and tease and hands out lollipops on Halloween.

WHAT ALMOST nobody knows is that "Mr. Ritter" is actually Chief Ritter — former chief, that is — of the Paterson, N.J., Auxiliary Police.

Ritter took off his chief's stars when he retired two years ago and moved to Buffalo Grove where he and his wife, Nellie, now live with their son William Jr.'s family.

But Ritter said he couldn't give up police work just like that, not after working his way up from patrolman in the Paterson reserve police department in 1941 to chief with 35 men under his command three decades later.

Ritter began listening in on police calls on a monitor he rigged up with his citizens' band radio, but couldn't stay away from the police station any longer.

A FEW MONTHS after he arrived in the village, Ritter dropped in on Buffalo Grove Police Chief Harry Walsh to chat about some of his experiences in New Jersey. Walsh put him to work and every school day since, Ritter has been at his post — loving every minute.

"There's just something about police work — it gets in your blood," Ritter said. "Why did I do it all those years without being paid? I guess you could say I like community relations because that's people and I really do love people."

And people, from the littlest tykes who go to Longfellow School to the high school kids and the school-bus drivers love Ritter right back.

WALSH HAS BEEN urging Ritter to put his stars back on his uniform for some time.

"He keeps telling me 'once a general, always a general,' and he used to call me 'chief' all the time, but I was kind of embarrassed, so now he always calls me 'Tex,'" Ritter said.

Ritter still carries his New Jersey auxiliary police chief's shield in his wallet, along with a marksmanship medal and another for his 30 years of service with the department. Besides his police work, Ritter also donated countless hours during 25 years in volunteer duties at a Paterson hospital.

Somehow, he managed to find time for a paying job as a truck

Divers recover one body

2 youths drown in Des Plaines River

Fire department scuba divers pulled the body of Jesse Kurup, 18 from the Des Plaines River Friday night but were unable to find the body of a teen-aged girl, also feared drowned.

Authorities said Kurup and Theresa Swiatek, 17, both of Chicago, fell into the river between Devon Avenue and Higgins Road earlier Friday while trying to cross a dam with three other friends. They lost their footing, fell in and were swept away by swift current caused by recent flooding in the area.

Fire department divers from Arlington Heights, Mount Prospect and several other towns searched into the night for the bodies of Miss Swiatek, 5754 W. Montrose Ave., and Kurup, 2838 N. Hamlin Ave.

Two friends, Steven Gurak and Susan Casablanca, dove in to try to save the pair but were unsuccessful, said Sgt. Richard Drehobl, director of Rosemont Public Safety Dept. Warren Davies, Morton Grove, witnessed the accident and attempted to help the young people in rescue efforts, Drehobl said.

Authorities said the strength of the water current near the dam made it difficult for scuba divers to search the bottom of the river.

The search for Miss Swiatek's body was expected to resume today.

Refugees fill Pendleton; last ship reaches Guam

by United Press International
The nation's largest refugee camp hung out the "No Vacancy" sign Friday.

The "Little Saigon" tent cities at Camp Pendleton, the huge Marine base stretching along the Pacific south of Los Angeles, were bulging at the seams with more than 18,000 Vietnamese refugees.

Thousands of other exiles of war — out of a total that could exceed 120,000 — were backed up in camps across the Pacific or still struggling out of Oriental ports of call.

Flights of the homeless were being shunted to Ft. Chaffee, Ark., and Eglin Air Force Base, Fla., where facilities scraped together after last week's fall of Saigon were becoming strained to capacity.

At Pendleton, about 18,403 men, women and children were crammed into hundreds of quonset huts and the overflow shared 1,000 large squad tents. Of these, 828 were Cambodians.

At Eglin Air Force Base in the Florida panhandle, the first two flights carrying an expected two-day total of 2,880 Vietnamese arrived Friday. If all 12 flights arrive on schedule, the tent city would have a population of 3,295 — 753 more than its intended capacity of 2,500.

One of the first off a jetliner as it landed at Eglin was Mrs. Nguyen Thi Huynh, her husband and two children.

"Are there any Communists around here?" she asked.

"No," replied one of her greeters. "Maybe I like to stay in this country," she said with a smile.

At Chaffee, about 10,000 refugees were being housed and fed and 2,341 more were expected Friday. Authorities said with some rearrangement of existing facilities the camp could house 20,000.

And still they came — thousands of unexpected refugees packed on South Vietnamese ships sailing through the South China Sea for Guam and the Philippines after a stopover in Singapore.

In Guam, where refugee camps are jammed beyond capacity, the last ship to leave Saigon steamed into port Friday with gaping rocket holes in her side but still flying the Vietnamese flag.

The 600 passengers aboard appeared to be wealthy Saigon residents, in sharp contrast to the ragged refugees who have been arriving aboard Navy charter ships.

With the majority of the refugees in one camp or another, the problem shifted to matching them with offers of help from thousands of Americans.

Less than 15,000 refugees, most of them relatives or friends of Americans, have found homes in the United States.

Congress appeared to have overcome its initial reluctance to approve President Ford's request for resettlement aid, and money bills in both the Senate and House were expected to pass next week.

But the whole resettlement operation appeared in danger of becoming tied up in red tape.

Many Americans wishing to help have not been able to get through the resettlement office's special toll-free number — 800-368-1180 — because of the jam of calls.

In Chicago, the head of "Illinois Convoy," a group of volunteers trying to line up jobs and homes for refugees, complained there were no local government agencies equipped to take the information.

"I mean, what the hell!" said Marilyn Gervais. "What am I supposed to do? Call the Washington computer and read them all these names? We hope to offer some kind of referral service or something. But now, even the Red Cross doesn't know what to do."

Viet Cong demand return of refugees

by United Press International
South Vietnam's new Communist rulers demanded Friday that the United States return 80,000 refugees it charged were forced to leave the country, in some cases after being drugged, the Yugoslav news agency Tanjug reported from Hanoi.

North Vietnam, meanwhile, accused the United States and Thailand of "unsavory tricks" which allowed a U.S. Navy aircraft carrier this week to repossess more than 100 aircraft left in Thailand by fleeing South Vietnamese pilots.

The North Vietnamese Vietnam News Agency said the Viet Cong barred flights of foreign aircraft over South Vietnam without prior permission starting Friday and warned it would take "necessary measures" against violators.

Political analysts in Saigon predicted an internal struggle between hard-core North Vietnamese leaders who want instant Communization and reunification of Vietnam and South Vietnamese Viet Cong who favor a gradual switch to the left and separate status for the two Vietnams.

The last South Vietnamese president, retired Gen. Duong Van "Big" Minh, who surrendered to the Communists April 30, said he expected to hold an advisory post in the new government.

Also in Indochina Friday:
• More than 1,000 demonstrators marched on the U.S. Embassy and government buildings in Laos, demanding that Americans go home and calling for the resignations of five right-wing members of Premier Souvanna Phouma's coalition cabinet. Three of the ministers bowed to the demands.

• Cambodia's new Communist regime said it has begun a "sound, clean social system" to repair the war-damaged country. A French surgeon said two former premiers were executed, women were raped and mutilated by Khmer Rouge troops and he saw 300 Cambodian corpses with their throats cut.

• The Philippines called for a non-aggression pact in Southeast Asia and expansion of the association of nations in the region, possibly to include the new Communist governments of Cambodia and South Vietnam.

• An estimated 50,000 South Koreans held a series of 30 separate rallies in Seoul pledging to solidify national security and defeat any North Korean aggression.

VIOLENCE BREAKS OUT among a group of picketing Detroit patrolmen Friday after a court decision on city-ordered layoffs. One protester approached a uniformed officer and pulled a gun. A scuffle ensued, but the protestor was subdued by other policemen and taken into custody.

House bill would hike gas prices

FEA sets plan to force switch from oil to coal

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Racing against a midsummer deadline, the Federal Energy Administration detailed plans Friday for forcing power plants and factories across the nation to burn coal instead of oil or natural gas.

FEA officials said the conversions, designed to cut the nation's reliance on high-priced foreign oil and scarce natural gas, could boost electric rates for consumers in the Midwest and other areas served by gas-burning power plants.

But officials said fuel costs — and thus the price of electricity — should go down where plants switch from oil to coal.

Meanwhile, House Ways and Means Chairman Al Ullman, D-Ore., formally filed the energy-conservation bill his committee agreed to after extended negotiations with administration officials. The committee takes a last look at the measure Monday before sending it to the House floor.

The bill would add 3 cents to the federal gasoline tax next year and might hike it by 20 cents in later years. It also would tax cars making inefficient use of gasoline, tax businesses on some fuel uses, give tax breaks for fuel saving, set oil-import quotas and impose import tariffs.

The FEA coal-conversion effort has assumed crash-program dimensions because the agency's authority to issue "prohibition orders" against oil and gas burning — never before exercised — expires June 30.

Although the FEA estimates conversions at existing power plants alone would save 160 trillion cubic feet of gas and 163 million barrels of oil each year, the program may be controversial because of cost features and increased air, water, noise and solid waste pollution.

Notices starting the conversion order process already have gone to a dozen gas-burning power plants.

Lift Cuban trade ban: McGovern

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. George S. McGovern, D-S.D., just returned from Havana, said Friday restoration of U.S.-Cuban relations hinges on the lifting of the American trade embargo against the Castro government.

Both the White House and Premier Fidel Castro indicated Thursday they are ready to improve relations between Washington and Havana.

But McGovern, who returned Thursday night after four days in Havana and 11 hours of talks with Castro, said the United States must first lift the trade embargo imposed 13 years ago.

He said Castro told him that compensation to U.S. companies for nationalized properties, release of nine U.S. political prisoners in Cuban jails and return of $2 million in airline hijack ransom money can "be laid on the table for discussion after the embargo is lifted."

Speaking on the NBC-TV Today program, McGovern said:

"I am going to recommend very strongly that we lift the blockade. We could send wheat, rice, dairy products to them. They could provide us with sugar and other things we need."

"He (Castro) made clear that medicine and food are the things they are most interested in."

The United States broke off diplomatic relations with Castro's communist regime Jan. 3, 1961. The trade embargo was imposed by a Senate resolution in October 1962.

Castro and McGovern discussed the possible exchange of baseball and basketball teams and the Cuban leader, a big sports fan, appeared to favor the move.

"I told him I thought the American people were in a mood now to take a new look at relations with Cuba," the South Dakota Democrat said.

Castro himself told American reporters accompanying McGovern, "We wish for the people of the United States a wish of friendship."

Gromyko conference set

Latin America won't be abandoned: Kissinger

by United Press International

Sec. of State Henry A. Kissinger Friday assured Latin American foreign ministers that, despite the collapse of Vietnam, the United States will not abandon its international commitments.

"It must be understood that the end of the war in Vietnam does not mean the end of international commitment of the American people," Kissinger said. "We will stand by our friends and our commitments."

Kissinger also promised his hemispheric colleagues the United States "will make a major effort to give new vitality to its Western Hemisphere relationships but this can succeed only as a cooperative enterprise."

Former Egypt foreign minister Abba Eban said Israel was to blame for the collapse of Kissinger's last Middle East peace mission because of its unrealistic expectations about Egypt's bargaining position.

In Cairo, President Anwar Sadat said the reconvened Arab-Israeli conference in Geneva would be "the last hope" for Middle East peace. He said the United States "holds all the cards" in the crisis because of its military and economic aid to Israel.

It also was disclosed that Kissinger and Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko will meet May 19 to discuss the United States' role in the Middle East and the current talks to limit nuclear weapons. Gromyko will visit Cairo following his meeting with Kissinger.

President Ford met briefly Friday with Soviet Ambassador Anatoly Dobrynin, but White House spokesmen said Ford's meeting with Dobrynin did not involve policy and was arranged only so that the Soviet Diplomat could deliver a personal message from Soviet leader Leonid I. Brezhnev commemorating the 30th anniversary of the allied victory in Europe.

Detroit cop protest turns violent

A federal judge's ruling that would exempt more than 250 blacks and women from a planned Detroit Police Dept. layoff touched off angry clashes Friday. One violent scuffle erupted when a demonstrating policeman, identified as patrolman William Green, pulled a gun from his pocket and waved it before fellow pickets. He was subdued by members of a tumultuous crowd and other police. There were no reports of serious injuries, but there were several fights and at least three radio and television newsmen were roughed up.

Doctor strike may spread nationwide

A leader of the California doctors strike protesting malpractice insurance costs said Friday the walkout may spread throughout the nation. The physicians hope to influence the state legislature to rewrite malpractice insurance laws, reducing legal costs and limiting jury settlements. The measures are proceeding through committees.

Defense Dept. backed Mideast bribes

The Defense Dept. coached businessmen on the need to bribe Middle East officials to make sales, according to a government document disclosed Friday. The defense briefing paper, sent last July to major aerospace and electronics trade associations, said Middle East agents often are paid to "influence" their governments to buy competitive foreign goods. It said firms which stop making influence payments often lose sales and contracts.

An incendiary device inside a coffee can wrapped in a manila envelope was left in the office of Colorado Lt. Gov. George Brown Friday by a middle-aged woman who chatted with a secretary before leaving. Police said the same woman, who called herself Janie Guess, left similar packages outside the office of Atty. Gen. J. D. MacFarlane and in the Social Services building across the street from the Capitol. The device left in Brown's office was detonated in an empty field.

Students clash again in Boston

Black and white high school students clashed for the third consecutive day in Boston Friday. Five white girls were injured. Police knew of no specific reason for the racial fighting, but said the students just "started swinging at each other."

3 pupils killed in school bus crash

A school bus careened out of control down a mountain highway Friday and flew off the freeway, killing three persons and injuring a number of others near Ashland, Ore. The bus, carrying 18 high school students and two advisers on a biology field trip, apparently lost its brakes.

Alger Hiss asks permission to return to practice of law

• Alger Hiss asked court permission Friday to return to the practice of law 27 years after a spying case perjury conviction shattered his career and helped launch that of Richard M. Nixon. The Massachusetts Supreme Court took the matter under advisement.

• Josephine Burson, a longtime leader in civic, charitable and governmental agencies, has been named 1975 Mother of the Year by the American Mothers' Committee.

• Sen. William R. Scott, R-Va., said the high unemployment rate in the United States prompted him to cast the only vote against a Senate resolution welcoming Vietnamese refugees to America. He said his mail is 2 to 1 against the refugees.

• John Wayne was treated Friday for walking pneumonia, but his son

• Mexican pilot Carlos Antonio de los Santos Montiel claims a UFO trailed a plane he was flying Thursday for about 10 minutes. Two air-traffic controllers said they saw the object's radar image.

• Lewis Engman, chairman of the Federal Trade Commission, said Thursday airlines should be permitted to reduce fares without government approval.

• Jordan's King Hussein took a ride in a sleek "Cigarette" offshore racing powerboat and said he enjoyed the ride so much he wants 10 of them.

• Deaths: John Shakespeare, one of the owners of the Shakespeare Fishing Tackle Co. in Centralla, was found bound and shot to death in his home Thursday. He was 69. George Baker, 59, who created the Sad Sack cartoon strip, died Wednesday of cancer. Dino Segre, 82, who wrote humorously pornographic novels in the 1920s under the pen name of Philgrill, died Thursday.

• "Conspiracy to streak" was the complaint against five persons in a civil suit in California Thursday. They were accused of conspiring to send two of their group streaking through a local bar where plaintiff Wilma Gardner said she was knocked over and suffered a back injury.

Topping out the shelter at Hillcrest Slough are Bill Esser and Richard Schuld.

Mother Nature finds a refuge

by LEA TONKIN

The land is soggy, an open wetland area that somehow escaped the relentless push of surrounding development.

It is the Hillcrest Slough on Ill. Rte. 83, Prospect Heights. The small pocket of nature holds the promise of outdoor enjoyment and education for Northwest suburban residents. To the 16 determined members of the Prospect Chapter of the Izaak Walton League and their volunteer assistants, it is a center of activity as the construction of a nature shelter reaches the final stage.

"We're putting the roof on now. We're hoping for completion by the end of the month," said Richard Schuld of Prospect Heights, president of the Izaak Walton League chapter. The 20-foot-by-30-foot shelter has been in the works for two years, Schuld said. When it is completed, the shelter will offer two fireplaces and picnic areas to visitors. The shelter is built on property owned by the Prospect Heights Park District that extends 200 by 300 feet. Condemnation proceedings have begun for several surrounding acres.

"THERE IS not only a need for the center, but part of our concern is for the area," Schuld said. "Many areas are being filled in for development. This not only is a retention area but it is a refuge. It's one of the last wetlands in the area."

"You can find raccoon, fish, Canadian geese, turtles, frogs, you name it," he said of the park area. "We wish it was more desolate but it's enjoyable."

The open-air nature center will be opened to the public later in the spring, climaxing a construction program that has attracted the support of many community organizations. "We're small, and we're tackling an ambitious project," Schuld said.

The nature-shelter project, valued at more than $11,000, has drained the Prospect chapter's funds. The group is about $2,500 in the hole. "There are more things we'd like to do there with a couple of thousand dollars more in improvements," Schuld said. Donations and volunteer help have enabled the group to move ahead with the construction program. "But we're always looking for donations," Schuld said.

Women coaches seek same pay as males get

Women coaches in High School Dist. 211 are asking for the same pay as their male counterparts.

Coaches for boys' and girls' sports are now paid on separate scales. Carl Flaks, president of the Dist. 211 teachers association, said some of the coaches approached the union to ask for equal pay and the union's contract improvement committee has agreed to bargain for one schedule in salary negotiations with the board this year.

The extracurricular pay for coaches of girls' sports this year ranges from $187 to $337 and the range for boys' sports is $337 to $786. The teachers are now asking that the sports be grouped together in one schedule with different levels for various coaching positions, said Flaks.

FACTORS THAT will affect extracurricular pay include length of the athletic season, the number of hours required for the coaching job and the "pressure factor" of performing before a crowd in spectator sports.

Flaks said the proposal "ruffled some feathers" of the male coaches but both the male and female coaches have now agreed to the proposed schedule.

In the past girls' athletics programs consisted mainly of intramural sports and "play days" as an extension of the physical education program. More and more competitive sports programs are being offered for girls, a trend that is likely to continue, said Flaks.

Because the sports programs are being made equal, some of the coaches felt the pay should also be equal, he said.

Schools study group in final meeting Mon.

Goals for Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 will be discussed Monday at 7:30 p.m. at Grove Junior High School, 777 Elk Grove Blvd., Elk Grove Village.

The district citizens' committee has prepared a list of preliminary goals ranging from an elementary school foreign-language program to behavior guidelines for students.

The Grove meeting is the last of five public hearings on the preliminary goals list. The committee is looking for parent comments and recommendations to be included in the final report to the board.

The committee has outlined eight areas for the district to investigate special programs for students and staff, transition into junior high school and testing for students entering school, communications, materials, educational programs, classroom environment, discipline and teaching techniques.

Recommendations include:

- Adding specialists to help children who are underachievers or who have social, physical or motivation problems.
- Starting a foreign language program in the elementary schools.
- Increasing after school activities.
- Implementing a reading clinic.
- Adding a remedial math program.
- Holding more teacher workshops.
- Improving communications between the home and school.

Bridal pair introduced at work

Working for a company that has two buildings across the street from each other kept Laurie Anne Warren and Robert K. Norris from meeting for a year. But when someone finally introduced them, it wasn't long until they began dating.

Laurie, whose parents are the H. L. Warrens of Arlington Heights, and Robert, son of Mrs. Karl D. Norris, also of Arlington, were married April 12 in St. James Catholic Church. A reception at the Maitre D' Restaurant followed the 6:45 p.m. ceremony, and the couple then left for a two-week honeymoon in the Ozarks. The newlyweds are now at home in Rosemont.

THEY WORK IN Des Plaines, the bride a secretary for Federal Pacific Electric Co. and the groom with Cornell-Dubiler Electronics. She is a graduate of Prospect High School. He attended Maine West High and the University of North Dakota.

Laurie's maid of honor was Suzanne Edgren, Arlington Heights, and bridesmaids were Susan Wallentin, Mount Prospect, and Jan Norris, the bride's sister-in-law, of Rosemont.

Charles Norris of Arlington Heights, brother of the groom, was best man, with Jon Gilbert, Des Plaines, and the groom's cousin, Thomas King, Downers Grove, as groomsmen.

THERE WERE two flower girls in the procession, Michele Norris, 7, Arlington Heights, and Nicole Gast, 3, Hanover Park, both nieces of the couple. The ring bearer, Karl Norris, 4, of Arlington, is the groom's nephew.

Laurie's wedding gown was trimmed with lace, and the Juliet cap which held her veil was also of lace. Her bouquet was of carnations, daisies and baby's breath.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert K. Norris

All of her adult attendants wore yellow floral printed gowns with matching jackets and carried yellow daisies and baby's breath. The flower girls wore flowered organza over yellow and carried nosegays of yellow daisies.

A blind date at college led to couple's marriage

A blind date for a sorority dance at Northern Illinois University brought about the meeting of Kathleen Anne O'Keefe of Mount Prospect and Lon Lademann of Downers Grove, who were married April 12 in St. Raymond Catholic Church.

Lon is still attending NIU while working on a master's in history and also teaches at Granger Junior High in Naperville. Kathleen is a nurse at Lutheran General Hospital.

They exchanged vows and rings in a 10:30 a.m. ceremony and later greeted 125 guests at a reception at Heck's Hall, Chicago.

KATHLEEN, daughter of the William H. O'Keefes, chose Karen Michalski, Norridge, as matron of honor. Bridesmaids included Linda Coffey, Charleston, Ill., Barbara Beechley, Naperville; Connie Lsley, Hillside; and Kathy Kennedy, Kankakee.

The bride chose a white jersey gown with Venetian lace and beading on the neck and bodice. Her elbow-length, lace-edged veil was held by a Juliet cap of lace, and her bouquet was of white roses and baby's breath.

All five of the bridal attendants were gowned in mint green jersey, each carrying a single rose with baby's breath.

LON IS THE son of Mrs. Nathalie Lademann of Downers Grove. Tim Vanderwall of Fairfield, Ohio, was his best man, with Ken Sawiea, Cary; Robert Herman, Wheaton, and Dick Herman and Steve Glere, both of Naperville, as groomsmen. David Creel of Naperville ushered.

Mr. and Mrs. Lon Lademann

After attending St. Patrick's Academy for three years, Kathleen graduated from Prospect High School and then from NIU. Lon attended North Central College, Naperville, for four years before going to NIU.

The newlyweds are living in Schaumburg after a week's honeymoon in Fort Lauderdale, Fla.

A homemade humidifier should dry out basement

Dear Dorothy: We've been renting a lovely house for our vacation periods the last few years, but last summer we had a difficult time. The basement had gotten so damp we were afraid to use it for anything. We like everything else about it so much we're going back, and I know an electric dehumidifier would probably do the basement job. But even if there wasn't an energy crisis, we'd hate to go to that extra expense. Is there anything else you know about on this score? — Charles F. Scammon

Over the last few years a number of readers have sent in cheers for the homemade dehumidifier suggested by a correspondent who obviously has an innovative turn of mind. It would be perfect for your situation. Use a No. 10 tin can and place a 12-inch square of screen over the top. On top of this place a cup of calcium chloride. The moisture is drawn into the can, which needs emptying about every other day. The person who sent in the idea kept one container in each corner of the basement. That ought to sop up all your excess moisture.

Dear Dorothy: After 27 years of married life, I decided to do something about my patterns, which were completely disorganized. I put them in an old suitcase in numerical order. Now I can open the case and in a few seconds have the pattern I need.

Finding this so practical, I arranged all my splices in alphabetical order. After all these years of wasted time, it takes only a brief period to get things in order. — Mrs. Betty Clinard

I've been promising to alphabetize my splices for years. If you can, so can I. Thanks for the nudge.

nuts. All you have to do is use a vegetable peeler, lightly. I thought many other readers might not know. — Jessica Kleber

Dear Dorothy: My wedding gown and train have been hanging in plastic bags in the closet for the last five years. So far neither has turned yellow. I did not have them cleaned at the time I got married, as the cleaning and preserving in a special box seemed quite expensive. Is there any way I can keep them from turning yellow? — Mrs. Robert Slicker

The general rule is never to store any garment unless it's been either cleaned or washed. With white, particularly, if there's any way of preventing it from turning color, it should be cleaned and immediately stored in an air-proof, completely sealed cardboard box. The flimsy plastic bags are the worst things to store certain materials in as they draw moisture which, belnded with atmospheric fumes, tends to affect colors. The heavy plastic garment bags are fine for most things, but I believe white needs extra care.

Lucky finds: old trunks and grandma Juniors give library $200

Today I have old trunks on my mind because I have been attempting to restore one that I bought a couple of years ago, and because I am thinking of Grandma Nordstrom.

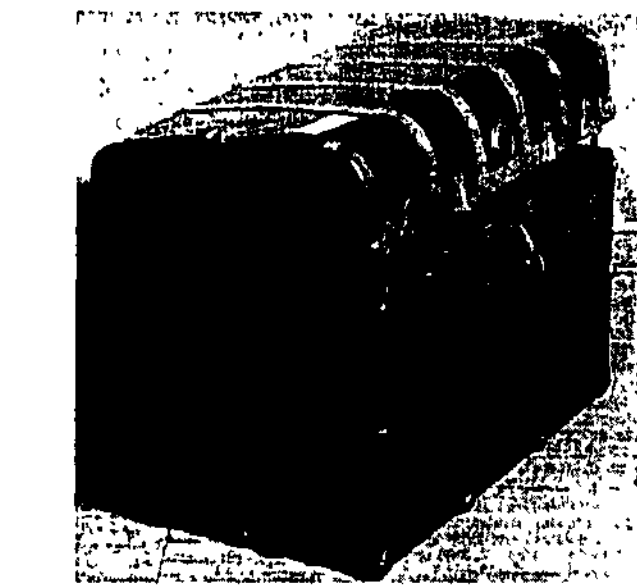

Everyone should know a Grandma Nordstrom. She is my husband's sister's mother-in-law, if you follow me. She stands about four feet nine inches, and is round, wispy-white haired, 83 and irrepressible. She smokes cigars, talks to butterflies and never met a stranger. She came from Sweden, some 60 years ago, as a young wife with her husband Carl and immediately set about shaping a new lifestyle blended of the wonders she found in America and remembrances of things past. She loved ring buses, shopping in all the neighborhood stores and turning her small backyard into another Eden.

HER COOKING and baking are legendary, and everyone — friend, neighbor, stranger — has always been the recipient of her kitchen's bounty. The men who came for the trash were treated to coffee and cardamon coffee cake in winter, lemonade and sugar cookies in the summer. She also regularly supplied them with new work gloves, gifts for the children and flowers and vegetables from her garden. Always, her trash was neatly collected, the alley swept clean. The mailman had an additional burden of home-baked goodies to carry on the rest of his route, and her favorite bus driver looked forward to stopping at her corner. Whether she rode or not, she often walked down to the stop to give him a bag of fresh-baked rolls.

We, as "ahlt-tail" relatives, have been the beneficiaries of all this largesse, too, for some 30 years, and have all shared the love of our honorary grandma.

AFTER LIVING 60 years in the "old neighborhood," she could no longer maintain a large house and reluctantly agreed to move to a smaller apartment, somewhat appeased by the thought of a brand new range and the promise of a small corner of the yard for a garden.

Cleaning out the lifetime accumulation of attic and basement was a two-week job for my sister and brother-in-law. Luckily they have college-aged children who were glad to take the surplus for their apartments. Among the treasures were three trunks, the very ones Grandma Nordstrom and her beloved Carl had brought to this country so long ago. Two were small humpback, brass-bound, and one was a large, tin-covered, with iron strap-ed by a Grandma Nordstrom. In a ping and leather handles, much like the one pictured. (Newspaper Enterprise Association Photo). The kids intend to use the trunks for storage and seating space.

TRUNKS SUCH as these are most popular in almost any kind of interior, for any room of the house. Mine is a small hump-back, with blue colored embossing on the tin, bound with wooden straps and brass fasteners. It needed only cleaning and polishing, and I intend to cover the inside with a canvas wallpaper in a small print, then use the trunk at the foot of the bed for storage.

Trunks also make fine coffee tables, if they are flat-topped. Even the rounded or hump-back such as mine may be turned on end to use as a side or lamp table. Once, in a model home, I saw such a trunk up-ended, wallpapered inside with a red and white provincial print. The door stood open and a pot of red geraniums was placed inside. The effect was charming.

Trunks are still available and the prices not too bad, if you can do a little restoration work. Usually the leather handles are broken or missing, and I understand these can be replaced at a harness shop. The tin covering can be cleaned (carefully, if you wish to retain the original color) and the wooden bounds refinished. I don't like to see trunks repainted unless they are in very bad condition.

Anyone who inherits or can find such a trunk is lucky. Lucky, too, are all those whose lives have been touch-

SIU grads exchange vows

A romance at Southern Illinois University culminated in marriage April 12 for Carol A. Brown of Bollingbrook and Michael L. Manlocha of Mount Prospect.

The couple exchanged vows at 11 a.m. in St. Dominic Church, Bollingbrook, and immediately afterwards received guests at a luncheon at the Ramada Inn, Burr Ridge.

Carol, daughter of the N.A. Browns, chose her sister, Ann Morrison of Menlo Park, Calif., as her honor attendant and another sister, Mary Leidner of Ames, Iowa, as bridesmaid. Both girls were gowned in light blue trimmed in white lace and carried carnations, bachelor buttons and baby's breath.

CAROL'S GOWN was of ivory satin with a lace bodice and was complemented by a floor-length veil. Her bouquet was of carnations, iris, bachelor buttons, stephanotis and baby's breath.

Michael is the son of Mr. and Mrs. L. Manlocha of Mount Prospect. His best man was Scott Kiester of DeKalb, and the bride's brother, Mark Brown, ushered.

Michael graduated from St. Victor High before going to SIU, where he earned a bachelor's degree in '72 and a master's in '74. He now works for Amex Coal Co., Chandler, Ind.

The bride earned her bachelor's degree from SIU in '74.

Flooding Mississippi hits crest

The flooding Mississippi River created Friday from Clinton to Keokuk, Iowa, and reached the third-highest level in Rock Island, Ill., history.

U.S. Weather Service officials said the river will remain at flood stage for at least 10 days.

The river reached a high of 19.3 feet in Rock Island. Flood stage is 15 feet. "It's downhill all the way now," said Don Bobb, Rock Island County Civil Defense director.

Few residents left their homes in the Quad Cities area, although in inundated areas such as Campbell's Island, off East Moline, people used boats and wore hipboots to get in and out of their houses.

Food-stamp 'outreach' plan

Illinois will begin a new "outreach" program to provide information about food-stamp eligibility, Public Aid director James Trainor said this week.

"Many people in the state do not know that they can receive food stamps," he said. "An outreach program will help all eligible households easily obtain food stamps."

Big names for Du Quoin

Impressionist Rich Little and singers Jim Nabors and Jim Stafford will appear at the Du Quoin State Fair this year.

Little and The Young Americans will appear in a "Bicentennial Celebration" show Thursday through Sunday night, Aug. 28-31.

Nabors will appear Labor Day Night Sept. 1 and Stafford and the Royal Lippizan Stallions will perform Aug. 28-27.

28 arrested in drug raids

Twenty-eight persons were arrested in a series of drug raids in three southern Illinois counties Friday.

About 80 agents of the Jackson, Williamson and Perry counties Metropolitan Enforcement Group seized a small quantity of marijuana and drug paraphernalia in the raids.

A MEG spokesman said five of the arrested persons were Southern Illinois University students and three were former students. None of the eight lived on the SIU campus.

Cook, DuPage jobless up

Unemployment-compensation claims in Cook and DuPage counties increased by 4.9 per cent this week.

Unemployment roles throughout the state increased by 19,844 persons to 277,208, a jump of 2 per cent.

Claims in Cook and DuPage totaled 161,048, the Illinois Bureau of Unemployment Security said Friday.

State claims were 204 per cent higher than for the same week in 1974, the bureau said.

Crash kills publisher's son

One of the two persons killed Thursday in the crash of a private plane in Peoria was the son of W. Walton Crouch, editor and publisher of the Beacon-News of Aurora.

The dead were identified as Dennis E. Love, 33, East Peoria, manager, and Richard W. Crouch, 34, Peoria, assistant manager of Mount Hawley Aviation.

Employees of the Aurora newspaper today confirmed that Crouch was the son of the Aurora publisher.

New pot law to be sought

The National Organization for the Reform of Marijuana Laws will return to the Illinois General Assembly next year to seek a change in Illinois marijuana laws.

A marijuana reform bill was introduced in the Illinois House without a final hearing this week. The proposed legislation, drafted by the Illinois Bar Assn., would eliminate jail sentences for possession of small amounts of marijuana.

"We believe that the General Assembly has a responsibility to the citizens of Illinois — including the 1 million citizens who smoke marijuana — to face this issue squarely, to debate the bill openly and to vote yes or no after all sides have been heard," Paul Kuhn, state coordinator for NORML, said this week.

"I don't understand how they can tell us to work within the system and then use the tactics of smoke-filled room politics to distort the system and prevent a fair hearing of our position," Kuhn said.

Kuhn said NORML will be back with a better bill in 1976.

Swinarski gets year, day

State Sen. Donald T. Swinarski was sentenced to a year and a day in prison Friday after pleading guilty to a charge of filing a false income tax return in 1969.

U.S. Dist. Court Judge Richard McClaren ordered the sentence after federal and defense attorneys begged for leniency because Swinarski "is co-operating with the government" in other corruption investigations.

Swinarski, 40, a former Chicago alderman, pleaded guilty to a charge that his 1969 income was more than $12,991.

McClaren said, "It is always a painful duty to sentence men who have been leaders of the community... On the other hand, wherever a public official is involved, he has breached his oath."

Religion today

A Bicentennial potpourri

American churches are moving into the Bicentennial observance with an intensity and zeal that is reminiscent of a religious revival. That is not to say the various observances, celebrations or programs associated with the churches' marking of the nation's 200th birthday will be a religious revival.

Rather, the churches recognize Bicentennial time as a period of both reflecting on and acting on the unique role religion has played in American history.

It also is a time for the various religious strains within the country to reexamine their own sense of identity, their uniqueness from and commonality with each other in the American pageant.

ONE OF THE first serious entrants in the Bicentennial field was the Roman Catholic Church. The American hierarchy's commission on the Bicentennial chose the well-worn phrase "Liberty and Justice For All" and planned an audacious program to breathe new life into the phrase while attempting to relate Catholic teaching, especially social teaching, to the American experience.

The Catholic program, featuring open hearings around the country — two already have been held and a third is planned for the Twin Cities area of Minnesota — is to culminate in Detroit next year with a major conference on justice.

Already, however, the Catholic program has run into severe criticism from within the ranks of the church. Sociologist Andrew Greeley, for example, has bitterly attacked the program as "attempt to celebrate the Bicentennial of our republic by tearing down the American accomplishment to pieces."

Today's column was written by David E. Anderson. Lester Kinsolving's "Religion Today" will resume next week.

Catholics are not alone in the field.

AT THE RECENTLY concluded meeting of the American Jewish Congress, the AJC launched a program to encourage American Jews to become involved in research on the Jewish component in American history as a part of their observance of the birthday.

As a first step in that program the AJC is publishing a booklet, "Jews in American Life: A Guide to Local Programming for the Bicentennial."

In an introduction to the booklet, Dr. Gladys Rosen notes that "the growth of the Jewish community in America has been intimately intertwined and enmeshed in this country's expansion, its social development, its economy and its institutions."

Not all of the response to the role of religious bodies in the Bicentennial celebration has been exclusively enthusiastic, however.

JAMES E. WOOD JR., for example, recently wrote the official Bicentennial organization — the American Revolution Bicentennial Administration — challenging some of their plans for funding nonprofit Bicentennial projects that would include the churches.

The ARBA wants to provide matching grants of up to 50 per cent for projects undertaken by religious and other private, nonprofit groups.

Wood, executive director of the Baptist Joint Committee on Public Affairs, told the ARBA it did not really understand what the relationship between religion and America was all about.

Herald opinion

Newhouse plan an OK remap

As noted here before, The Herald believes that redistricting of Illinois congressional districts is uncalled for and unnecessary.

However, a new plan for such redistricting, introduced this week by Sen. Richard Newhouse, D-Chicago, is far superior to the original plan sponsored by Senate Pres. Cecil Partridge, D-Chicago, which is widely believed to be the pet plan of Chicago Mayor Richard J. Daley.

The Daley-Partridge plan is, on its face, one designed to ensure control of nine congressional districts including parts of Chicago by the mayor and his political machine.

That map would also, rather incidentally, limit the chances of minority groups in Chicago to control more than two of Illinois' 24 congressional districts and would probably ensure the retirement of Rep. Abner J. Mikva, D-10th, who is not one of the favorite sons of the mayor's Democratic organization.

Under the Daley-Partridge plan, Mikva would be thrown into the same district as Democrat Sidney Yates of Chicago, and would have virtually no chance of reelection.

The question of whether Mikva — or any other Illinois congressman — is reelected is not a proper consideration for the drawing of congressional districts in the state, however.

Democrats have been smarting under the insult of living with a Republican-drawn map since 1971 — despite the fact that they improved their control of congressional seats from a deficit of 14-to-10 to an advantage of 13-to-11 in the 1974 election.

The map which the Republicans drew, however, met the test of a court challenge, and it should be allowed to stand until the next constitutional redistricting following the 1980 census.

Unfortunately though, the Democrats have the votes in the legislature to force a new redistricting plan if they choose. Should the Democrats insist upon it, we urge suburban legislators to back Newhouse's plan, which would, among other things, provide more adequate representation to minorities in Chicago, as well as to suburban residents.

A stolen election

If you think that it's possible that an election or two in the Northwest suburbs might have been "stolen," then perhaps you should consider the case of downstate Sumner (pop. 1201), where the election actually was stolen.

It seems that the marked ballots from two wards were stolen last week from a storage cabinet in the city clerk's office. Coincidentally, the incumbent aldermen in the two wards had been defeated on April 15 — and the one who had lost by five votes had filed for a recount.

If the passions aroused by the election in Sumner are similar to those aroused in the Northwest suburbs, we aren't surprised that the ballots have vanished. When someone says the election in Sumner was "stolen," they won't be far from the truth.

'Theater too expensive'

I'd like to enter a kind of protest against what I consider an oversight in all the fuss and feathers about the shutting down of the Ivanhoe and Arlington Park Theatres, and that is the lack of common sense about the "star" system in gathering audiences. There is nothing wrong in having a featured star player, as has been well proven by Pheasant Run Playhouse and all the Drury Lane theatres. If you can do so and still make a profit after operating expenses. But all the complaints about lack of public support are really not well founded. What the hangup is, is pricing the show above its entertainment value. Theatregoers don't like to be overcharged any more than anybody else.

Take that $15 per person price during the Gabor's sojourn at Arlington. For that price you could have dinner and a show, for two, at the Country Club Comedy Playhouse in Mount Prospect. Not only that, you could also have better seats, better staging (this in-the-round theatre is highly overrated), and a much better show. I recently sat through the tiresome first act, mildly amusing second act and rather flat third act of "13 Rue de L'Amour" at Arlington and wondered why I had bothered to go at all. Contrast this with an evening spent early this past month at Nick Hall's "Accommodations" at the Country Club Comedy Playhouse, where I, and the rest of the audience, could scarcely catch our breaths between laughs during the show. (The two-person inebriation scene that runs 40 minutes of the second act of this show was funnier than the last three entire shows I have seen at Arlington.) The point is, what theatres need is, first of all, a good play.

If it's a tossup between big names and a good play, I'll take the latter any time.

Coverage applauded

Since I have just completed my term as village trustee, this is an appropriate time to evaluate and comment on The Herald's coverage of board of trustee meetings.

The press in Arlington Heights has a great responsibility to keep the citizens informed about local government issues because, sad but true, hardly anyone attends trustee meetings, except in the rare event of a hearing on a very controversial matter. People here either rely on the press or just plain are not interested.

Local papers, and especially The Herald, have been doing a good job towards meeting this responsibility, both in coverage and in writing quality. The reporters deserve commendation for trying to present fairly various points of view and for avoiding the publishing of quotations out of context to make a more sensational story. We who have been around Arlington Heights for 20 years appreciate the improvement.

This is not to say, however, that we trustees have always been completely happy with what is printed about board meetings. Often our carefully thought-out statements and forensic gems are completely ignored while the hasty words that pop out in the heat of debate wind up on the front page, but that is what makes readable copy. The reporters do make good use of quotations to punctuate stories for reader interest and to show the mood of discussions.

Finally, I appreciate the efficient personnel, organization and equipment that can sift through the thousands of words from an 8 to 11 p.m. (or later) meeting, write up the gist of the more important matters, set and print the copy and have it at our door by breakfast time the next morning. That is quite an achievement for a local paper.

Backs park district

Dear Mr. Donald P. Konny:
I am replying to your letter of severe criticism of the Palatine Park District in the Fence Post of the Palatine Herald.

I know nothing about the hockey banquet but say in brief that your derogative remark of "not anticipating receiving a reply from the park district" was most unjust. Wouldn't it have been more fair to file your complaint with the park director, Fred Hall, personally? Then, if ignored, your letter to the Fence Post would have been justified.

Thank goodness there are so many appreciative parents and residents who respect all the efforts of the park district and their youth programs.

Refugee support hit

How can we afford to support all the refugees brought in and provide millions of dollars for their support when:

- We cannot afford to help or provide homes for our foster children or adoptive children, nor find a doctor to care for them because the welfare people cannot pay them. It takes three to six months before the doctors are paid and they do not like waiting that long for their money. I am referring to suburban children.

- We have families out of work. Ask them how long it takes to get welfare money. What do their families do in the meantime? Bill collectors do not wait for welfare funds, neither do the empty stomachs of their children.

- The elderly of this city and other cities can not even afford fruit in their diets on the meager rations doled out to them. Where is the millions for their room and board, and medical attention?

- We have physically disabled people that could use some of those millions for special training or special equipment. What about the problem of adjusting the curbs in the streets for wheelchairs?

I plead with all the people who have these problems; foster homes, families out of work, senior citizens and the disabled, to write of their plight. Let's see how compassionate the people are, who are ready to contribute their tax dollars to refugees, to their own people.

Bob Lahey Singer highlights Crane-Reagan dinner

Midway through the opening dramatics of the Phil Crane testimonial dinner Tuesday, my dinner companion inquired, "Who is this John Doremus, anyway?"

The questioner was among the patriots of Illinois journalism, a man who knows this state exceedingly well, even if he is not conversant with every late-night disk jockey who ever graced the midnight airwaves of the Chicago area.

This gentleman has labored for some four decades in running a newspaper downstate. He has had little time for listening to voices of the night which come out of Chicago radio stations. So, John Doremus, I guess, was something of a new experience for him.

Doremus took nearly half an hour of the Crane dinner in presenting screened versions of patriotic commercials similar to what he does on network television, for what I suppose is adequate pay, for a certain oil company.

The reason that I use my good friend and former employer, the newspaper editor, as the focus of this piece, is that he sort of emphasized what happened at that dinner for Phil Crane.

The gentleman of whom I speak is a man who has lived his life in a university community, pursuing news, since shortly after the Great Depression. I can't formally accuse him of it — but if I had to bet, I would say he is a Democrat. And I harbor this suspicion that he even liked Franklin D. Roosevelt.

It indeed he is a Democrat, he has survived for three decades and more in what has been until just recently solidly Republican country.

But even in the solid GOP territory of Champaign County, where hardly a single Democrat was elected to office from the early 1830s to the mid 1970s, there is seldom the display of conservatism such as that personified by Doremus.

Doremus does his act with a great degree of professionalism, exercising what has to be one of the most fully developed of professional "broadcasting voices" in extolling the glories of America and the Republican Party.

Put on the same program with Crane and former California Gov. Ronald Reagan, both of whom were visibly moved by Doremus' performance, this silver-tongued speaker brings the evening's proceedings to the level of patriotic overkill.

Doremus, Crane and Reagan all repeated themes of the need for individual enterprise, the reduction of government interference in private lives — and of "total victory" in military enterprises.

Interspersed with rousing renditions of the patriotic songs of our childhood, these pronouncements brought a hearty response from an audience of nearly 1,000 persons.

The enthusiasm of the crowd, although it was partisan, was impossible to ignore.

For one who has witnessed Crane enthusiasts responding to his call for conservatism, it was not unexpected. But I believe that a certain newspaper editor returned to central Illinois wondering if there is more to conservative GOP sentiment that he had earlier suspected.

Dorothy Meyer

Those 'portable' items wreck Dorothy's spring

After a week of house-cleaning, gardening and portables I'm painfully aware of my age, every muscle in this weary old frame and that fact that some portables aren't. And when you get as pooped as I am today, nothing's portable with the possible exception of a cup of coffee. Which I just dropped.

I was spring house-cleaning this past week because my neighbor's forsythia is blooming and I am three-and-a-half seasons behind with washing walls and woodwork.

Besides, I was having company.

So I housecleaned the kitchen and entertained in a dirty living room which is how come I'll never win a homemaker of the year award. I would have gotten to the living room too if the kitchen hadn't taken so long but everything there looked as if Marilyn and I spend our idle hours flinging left-overs at the walls.

Due to the density on the walls I ran out of cleaning compound and had to change clothes so I could go to the store. And I discovered that my wardrobe had suddenly disintegrated. Nothing was intact and I vowed to attend to that as soon as I finished the kitchen. Hoping I wouldn't meet anybody I knew, I went shopping in an outfit designed to make strangers feel sorry for me and saw 11 acquaintances who pretended they didn't recognize me.

DOROTHY MEYER

I also saw the store's gardening section and came home with two dozen plants which caused me to change clothes again and go outside to dig in the dirt. With a kitchen half clean and a wardrobe needing emergency first aid, I spent three hours making a flower garden, which is how come I'll never be homemaker of the year even if they award booby prizes.

By the time I was finished in the garden, so were my muscles, and as they were discussing mutiny, my stomach growled. "Hey, remember me?"

This was true. Sometimes I think manufacturers call anything portable as long as it has a handle on it and they'd market a portable elephant if they could figure out where to put the handle.

After dinner I almost picked up my old portable sewing machine so I could repair my wardrobe. That, too, has a handle on it, but in my weakened condition it was no more portable than an elephant, so I sat on the floor to use it.

Finally, there was last night's last-night-of-bowling session. Barely able to lift it, I took my portable bowling ball and used it as per the definition of "port" from which "portable" is derived: "to carry (in military fashion) in a slanting direction upward toward the left and across the body."

No wonder I'm pooped today.

Track must reach barn pact with village

Racing dates approved, but...

by KURT BAER
The Illinois Racing Board approved a license Friday for Arlington Park Race Track to open its season June 9 provided that race track officials and the Arlington Heights Village Board reach agreement on the replacement of wooden barns in the backstretch.

John F. Loomis, president of Arlington Park-Washington Park Race Tracks Inc., said he will present a master plan for the race track land at the next village board meeting May 19.

The plan is expected to include at least preliminary mention of a proposed 80,000-seat stadium.

A CONTRACT BETWEEN Arlington Park and the village specifies that 20 per cent of the wooden barns at the race track must be replaced each year with fireproof concrete stables and dormitories.

The racing board order, awarding Arlington Park 94 choice summer racing dates, also required 20 per cent barn replacement.

But except for one wooden barn that burned to the ground a year ago, none of the structures have been replaced this year.

Loomis asked the village board April 21 for a one-month extension on the barn question in order to complete the master plan.

THE RACE TRACK has asked for permission to use all of its existing 20 wooden barns this season. In response, the village board's public health and safety committee recommended an option that would let the barns stand through the end of the racing meet Sept. 25, provided seven barns are torn down by Oct. 25.

The committee's recommendation also requires the race track to build a 170-room dormitory for backstretch employees. The new dormitory quarters are to replace tackrooms that would be eliminated in the demolition of the wooden barns.

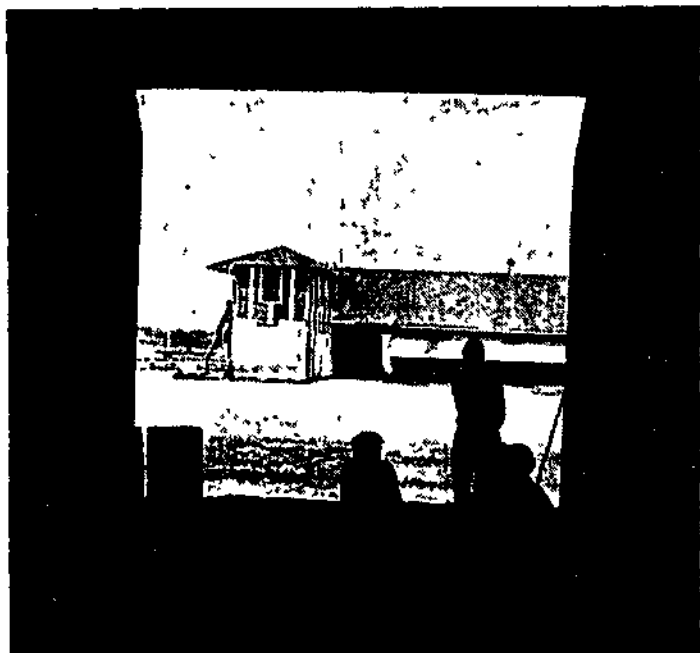

"It is up to the racing board to await the decision of the Village of Arlington Heights in this matter," said racing board member Lucy Roum in recommending that Arlington Park be licensed to open June 9.

"We will be abiding by the village's decision in this case," she said.

WILLIAM THAYER, Arlington Park track manager, told the racing board that all other conditions in the 1975 dates order either already have been satisfied or will be met before the track opens.

Improvements included resurfacing the main race track, the planting of 100 additional trees, resurfacing parts of the parking lot and remodeling in the grandstand.

Thayer did not mention a list of 144 fire code violations detailed by the Arlington Heights Fire Protection Bureau during three days of inspections WOODEN BARN at Arlington Park Race Track are part of an agreement that allows the suburban track to open its season June 9. The Illinois Racing Board granted the track the starting date provided the barns are replaced according to an agreement between the track operators and the Village of Arlington Heights.

in March. Although the racing board requested reports from the village's fire, health and building departments on conditions at the race track, it did not refer to any of them Friday.

Many of the fire code requirements include such things as replacing missing fire extinguishers, fire doors, exit signs, the repair of walls and ceilings and the removal of stored trash at various places throughout the grandstand.

80,000 seats Soldier Field renewal planned

Chicago architects are preparing plans for transforming Soldier Field into an 80,000-seat football stadium.

The plans, prepared by three Chicago architectural firms, call for renovation of the stadium interior while maintaining the present exterior. The designs also call for:

- Moving the seating area to within 40 feet of the playing field, as in most new stadiums. The seating area now begins 70 feet from the field.
- Dropping the playing field from 13 to 18 feet, which would open an additional seating area and improve crowd control.
- No second deck. Seats would stretch upward from the playing field on one large deck.
- Retaining the small, separate stadium north of the main Soldier Field football field for concerts and other outdoor events.

Cost estimates range above and below the $40 million figure mentioned since renovation of Soldier Field was first proposed in July 1971. Officials said the cost figures are related to planned seating capacity.

Holy Family 'employee of year'

Florence Paul of Des Plaines has been named employee of the year at Holy Family Hospital.

Mrs. Paul, secretary in the hospital's Social Services Dept. since 1971, was selected by employees of the hospital. Nominations for the honor were based on "employees' loyalty, unselfish service beyond the call of duty, initiative and superior performance on the job."

In her job Mrs. Paul helps assist patients and their families who suffer social or emotional stress aggravated by illness or injury. The department also helps transfer patients to extended health-care facilities.

"My job has been extremely rewarding," Mrs. Paul said. "To know that families are helped by our services leaves me with a very satisfied feeling."

Florence Paul

Marguerite Clapp of Des Plaines, a licensed practical nurse on the hospital's maternity floor was first runner-up in the election. Second runnerup is Debbie Evans of Palatine, a clerk-typist in Holy Family's physical therapy department.

Sox blank Cleveland; 12 straight for Kaat

Pat Kelly's two-run homer in the eighth inning enabled southpaw Jim Kaat to become the first pitcher in White Sox history to win 12 straight games Friday night in a 2-0 Chicago victory over the Cleveland Indians.

Kaat, who has not lost since August 31, 1974, struck out five, walked two and allowed six hits in running his season mark to 5-0. Cleveland starter and loser Gaylord Perry hurled hitless ball over the first five innings but lost his fourth game in eight decisions when Tony Muser opened the eighth with a single to deep short. Kelly then belted a 1-1 pitch over the rightfield fence for the game's only runs.

The victory the 219th of Kaat's career and pushed him past John Rigney (1939) and Gary Peters (1963) — both of whom won 11 straight games for previous White Sox clubs.

Cowens keeps Boston alive

Dave Cowens' hook shot with less than two minutes to play, followed by a steal by the Boston center, gave the Celtics a 103-99 win over the Washington Bullets Friday night and another life in the NBA Eastern Conference finals. Washington leads the series 3-2, the next game set for Sunday at Landover, Md.

The Celtics, who had led by as much as 11 points in the first half, fell behind in the opening minute of the fourth quarter, 88-81. Cowens, playing the entire period with five fouls, scored 11 of his 27 points in the final frame. Phil Chenier led all scorers with 32 points, followed by Elvin Hayes with 29.

Monday up, down in 5-2 Cub win

Rick Monday cracked a two-run homer in the first inning Friday and then was forced to leave the game after a fourth inning centerfield collision as the Chicago Cubs battled to a 5-2 triumph over the San Diego Padres.

Darold Knowles relieved after 7-2/3 innings for the Cubs, earning his sixth save and preserving starter Ray Burris' fourth win against one defeat.

The Cubs got three of their nine hits in the first inning off starter Joe McIntosh, beginning with singles by Don Kessinger and Jose Cardinal. Kessinger scored on an error before Monday connected for his fourth home run. The Cub centerfielder later collided with second baseman Rob Sperring chasing Willie McCovey's pop fly but clubhouse reports said he suffered only from having the wind knocked out of him and would be able to play Saturday.

Borg over Laver in WCL marathon

Bjorn Borg outlasted Rod Laver in four hours of magnificent tennis Friday night, 7-6, 3-6, 5-7, 7-6, 6-2, to move into the finals of the World Championship Tennis tournament and Laver said he had had his last crack at the only major title he has never won.

"I think I've had my last shot at it," said Laver, who has participated in all five WCT championships. "It is not a disappointment. If I had played badly and lost, I would have been disappointed. But I have no sadness." The 36-year-old Australian and the 18-year-old Swede produced one stupendous shot after another in one of the longest matches to be played since the advent of the tie-break system. In the second semifinals match of the night, Australian John Alexander faced top-seeded Arthur Ashe for the right to meet Borg.

And in other sports news...

A wildcat walkout of 2,200 workers kept the site of the 1976 Montreal Summer Games idle Friday but sources for the Olympic organizing committee scoffed at any possibility the strike could seriously threaten the future of the Games. . . . The minor league San Antonio Toros filed a $3 million lawsuit charging the World Football League with trying to monopolize the professional game in an area not big enough to support two teams.

The WFL was in the news more positively with word that veteran pro quarterback Sonny Jurgensen, forced into retirement last week by the Washington Redskins, listened to an offer — possibly in the $1 million range — by the Philadelphia Bell franchise. . . . In Germany the widow of Avery Brundage said the body of amateur sports' most dedicated champion, who died of a heart attack at the age of 87 Thursday, would be flown home to Chicago next week for burial.

Forest View's Magnificent Seven will ride into battle today for the title of Mid-Suburban League outdoor track and field champion.

The Seven are Steve Schellenberger, Mike Harvey, Jim Vartanian, Dave Matzl, Vince Ippolito, Bill Mitsos, and Mike Mitsos. And though they are not the only capable trackmen on the Forest View team, they will represent the Falcons' main strength when the shoot-out begins at 9 a.m. on the Hoffman Estates High School track.

If the Seven run to form, they will account for eight Forest View first places and 48 points, the same total that gave the Falcons a comfortable victory last year at Prospect. With 48 points, Forest View would be virtually unbeatable for top challengers Fremd, Schaumburg, Rolling Meadows, or Hoffman Estates.

Points scored by Falcon two-miler Darryl Robinson or weightmen Mike Mischnick and Randy Graitsch would be merely icing on the cake for Forest View's MSL indoor champions.

But not too many coaches or athletes are likely to concede those eight first places to Forest View. Take the opinion of one MSL coach:

"Since the indoor meet, Forest View has been standing still while everyone else has been improving," he said. "They may be the favorite now, but it's going to be a helluva meet."

Rolling Meadows head coach Joe Vitton feels the same way. "I think they can be beaten," said Vitton. "There will be four other teams chipping away at the points, and I think that will be enough to hold Forest View out. I know one thing — it won't be a runaway for anybody."

The key for Forest View appears to be junior runner Steve Schellenberger, who is entered in the 220-yard dash, the 440, and the 800 — and he is favored in all three races. Last year, as a sophomore, Schellenberger won the 220 and the 440 and anchored the Falcons' winning mile relay squad.

The Forest View coaching staff is counting on Steve's remarkable strength and endurance for three victories. They will also hope for a pair of firsts from Harvey, a junior, in the long jump and the triple jump. Matzl, the defending low hurdles champ, and Vartanian, another junior, are rated first in the lows and the highs, respectively.

The Mitsos twins plus Ippolito and Matzl will probably be the favorites in the mile relay, though they will get a tough argument from Arlington, Hoffman, and Palatine.

Fremd and Schaumburg are both capable of scoring in the 40-point range, and Meadows and Hoffman may not be too far behind. With a slip-up anywhere down the line by Forest View any of those four teams could nose into the title.

The Fremd Vikings rely heavily on their corps of distance runners, three of whom — Paul Kinyon, Will Fieldhouse, and soph John Filosa — were absent when the Vikings fell to a disappointing fifth in the MSL indoor meet last March.

If the Vikings got firsts and seconds from Fieldhouse and Filosa in the two-mile, Kinyon and Dave Cott in the mile, and a second from Kinyon in the half, coach Pat Brogan would be happy.

"The distance boys will be there, you can be sure of that," said Brogan. "But we need to hit in the field events."

Fremd must get a first from shot-putter Rich Sharpe and a first or a second from long jumper Lawson England. Sharpe will need to do well in the discus and Randy Gray must take a second in the pole vault. Top performances are expected, also, from hurdler Sam Benevides and high jumper Jim Hamill.

Schaumburg's field event specialists — Bruce Mahlig in the pole vault, Scott Mielke in the high jump, and Dave Wodek in the weights — lead the Saxons' title hopes. But Schaumburg expects to get points from sprinter Paul Rizzo, hurdler Brian Felcho, and half-miler Mark Hoerich. If the Saxons get good performances from long jumpers Mielke and George McCahey, 440-man Steve Pace, and 220-runner Roger Biver, they will be right in there for top honors.

Rolling Meadows hopes to get points from sprinter Rick Sutton, triple jumper Greg Davis, high jumper Jeff Lund, weightmen Jim Evensen, Dave Thompson, and Jim Bluhm, and vaulters Mark Harris and Mike Quinnett.

Hoffman Estates will need good efforts from its relay teams and from half-miler Ed Elliott, low hurdler Dave Lipko, quarter-miler Steve Lind, triple jumper Mike Brewka, and miler Sam Cox. The fledgling Hawks have no seniors.

Six records were broken in last year's conference meet, and two of the record-breakers will return with their sights set higher. Matzl will attempt to better his :39.1 mark in the low hurdles, and Mahlig is almost a cinch to eclipse his 14-2 effort in the pole vault.

Two other marks in jeopardy are the 6-3 high jump recorded by Palatine's Jim Brandt three years ago, and last year's 41-foot triple jump by Schaumburg's Ed Martin.

Kinyon could make a run at the long-standing 4:13.8 mile clocking held by Leo Labadie of Maine West, and Bill Jarocki's half-mile record of 1:53.4 might be in reach with Schellenberger, Hoerich, and Kinyon running well.

The conference frosh-soph meet will be held at the same time as the varsity meet on the same track. Varsity finals start at 1:30.

PREPARING FOR the stretch run is Fremd's Paul Kinyon, who maintains a lead over Mark Hoerich of Schaumburg in the 880-yard run in the Dist. 211 track meet at Fremd. Kinyon won in 1:56.8 and Hoerich was second in 1:58. Kinyon will run the mile today in the Mid-Suburban League championships at Hoffman Estates. Finals begin at 1:30.

Fremd names Zion-Benton coach to head cage post

by PAUL LOGAN

Morris "Mo" Tharp is Fremd High School's new head basketball coach.

Fremd athletic director Al Ratcliff made the announcement Friday that Zion-Benton's very successful coach would be taking the job formerly held by Leon Kasuboske.

Tharp, 31, was among a fine field of men who applied for the Palatine school's position, including five head coaches from outside the area.

"I'm sure they would have all done a very, very good job here," said Ratcliff. "But Mo's head and shoulders above them."

"Coach Tharp's greatest strength as a basketball coach is his ability to relate to players and to get them to perform at their highest level of efficiency."

"We feel we're turning our basketball coaching job to the most capable coach around. We're fortunate to get him," added Ratcliff.

"I'm very pleased and proud I got the job," said Tharp.

Zion-Benton's former head man has helped bring the school its greatest glory during his four years as its leader. Besides rolling up a 72-29 varsity record, Tharp took the Zee-Bees farther than they had ever gone before in the state tournament.

They reached the sectional finals where a shot with three seconds to go gave New Trier East a one-point victory. New Trier, which hadn't led until that last second shot, went on to finish second in the state three years ago.

Tharp's teams also advanced the regional finals twice in the past two years, losing both times in close ball games to Waukegan.

His last two teams have won North Suburban Conference titles and have a 23-game league winning streak going.

Despite such great success for this former Zion basketball star (All-Chicago area in 1962), Tharp said the Fremd position "presents a new challenge. It's something I'm very willing to accept. I'm hoping we can make Fremd one of the basketball powers in the state."

Tharp has helped mold three straight players for major college basketball in the last three years. His latest — Danny Mack — is an all-stater who's going to the University of Oregon. Brian Colbert started as a freshman for the University of Wisconsin in last season and Billy McKinney, a sophomore, was North western's most valuable player this year. Tharp's hoping he can continue to produce outstanding collegiate prospects.

He described his style of play as "basically fastback, full court pressure and man-to-man defense."

Tharp is married and has four children. He said they planned to move to the area.

"It's an opportunity for me," said Tharp of his new position. "I look at Palatine as a step up. A new horizon to look to. They've got a very good school system."

Aside from being a successful coach, Ratcliff pointed out that his new head man has been "rated as an outstanding social studies teacher."

Prior to taking an assistant's job the first three years at Zion-Benton, Tharp assisted one year at Antioch High School, and also one year at Cheyenne Wells in Cheyenne, Colo.

He's a graduate of Carthage College and received his master's degree at Roosevelt University.

Big clash set in district tennis as Cards and Broncos advance

Arlington and Barrington advanced in top form as expected in first-round play of the district tennis tourney Friday at Arlington High School. The two tennis powerhouses will each send two singles and two doubles teams into final-day action beginning at 9 a.m. today. Only one team will move on to the state tourney on the same courts in two weeks.

At the Maine West District, favored Forest View moved into the second day with two singles and two doubles alive. Also advancing were players from Elk Grove, Schaumburg, Conant, and Maine West.

In the Arlington District, where the host Cardinals of coach Tom Pitchford are being threatened with their first district loss in 11 years, the play went true to form. Arlington's Luke Weeg defeated Scott Adashek of Fremd, 6-2, 6-1, and teammate John Walner handled pesky Bob Milligan, also of Fremd, 7-5, 6-3.

Weeg will face Dan Hanson of Prospect today in second-round action. Hanson beat Glen Addison of Hersey, 6-1, 6-2. Walner's first opponent today will be Hersey's Keith Raynor, who disposed of Kirk McIntosh of Prospect, 6-0, 6-3.

In doubles, Arlington's premier team of Paul Wei and John Yeazel dumped Pat Fleming and Bruce Fischer of St. Viator, 6-0, 6-2, and Card mates Todd Van Gorp and Pete Burkhardt eliminated Bob Herman and Greg Hanat of Rolling Meadows 6-3, 6-2.

Barrington got singles victories from Brad Burton, who beat Palatine's Dana Morgenroth, 6-3, 6-0, and from Regan Romel, who bested R.M.'s Greg Nyklel, 6-0, 6-2. The Broncos' tough doubles entry of Mike Gospodarek and Rod Dowdell handled (6-0, 6-1) Bob Day and Ken Kohl of Palatine, and Barrington's second doubles unit, Jay Olson and Pat Miller, beat St. Viator's John Hollowed and Tom Lenz, 6-0, 6-1.

Prospect finished the first round in third place behind Arlington and Barrington by gathering a pair of doubles wins plus the singles victory for Hanson. Tom Frederick and Tom Wegner won over Hersey's Scott Powell and Steve Felice, four and four, and Dave Hughson and Gary Thomas stopped Mike Mitsch and John Matsura of Fremd, 6-2, 6-3. Hughson and Thomas will meet Van Gorp and Burkhardt this morning and Frederick and Wegner face Gospodarek and Dowdell.

Hersey's doubles team of Kip Hahn and Jeff Groover won a hard-fought decision over Palatine's Jerry McNabney and Phil Groesbeck, 6-4, 7-6. They will face Olson/Miller of Barrington in the second round today.

Rolling Meadows got a doubles victory from Chuck Fischer and Brad Weber over Steve Adashek and Chris Harris of Fremd, three and four. The Mustang duo will meet Arlington's Wei and Yeazel for the right to advance.

St. Viator got a pair of points from singles winners Tom Wenzel and Jeff Davenport. Wenzel beat Jeff Harper of Meadows, 6-1, 6-1, and Davenport took Mike Esenberg of Palatine, three and three.

Forest View's doubles teams of Dave O'Donnell and Doug Meyer and Steve Calderone and Nick Kekos moved past teams from Schaumburg and Elk Grove Singles player Mark Silles was a winner in his first two rounds and Falcon mate Tom Kodadek won easily in his first round.

Schaumburg's Tracy Madon drew a bye and then topped Elk Grove's Ken Algotin in a three-setter. Algotin had won his first-round match. Elk Grove's Bill Siebold is still alive with a victory in straight sets over Driscoll.

Conant's Orson Faynor ripped his first-round opponent from Lake Park, four and three, and Schaumburg's doubles team of Gary Wright and Steve Collins and Elk Grove's duo of Rob Soderholm and Bob Curran also advanced.

Wheeling's Mike McMahon and Marty Knutilla advanced in singles play at Highland Park while Buffalo Grove's doubles team of Tim Kane and Bill Christensen moved past Wheeling in the first round before falling to Deerfield, 5-7, 6-3, 2-6.

Plan muskie waters in Illinois

You'll have to let your imagination run wild to create this scene:
You're pitching spinnerbaits in the heavy cover at Lake Shelbyville in central Illinois, praying for that lunker largemouth to hit and give your 10-pound test line a workout.
The strike boils the water, but as you rear back to set the hook, the monofilament snaps and you reel in nothing but slack, broken line. Immediately you condemn a big-razor-toothed northern pike for the theft.
But actually the villain, still swimming with your spinnerbait dangling from its leather-tough lip, is a monster MUSKIE!
"Muskie in Illinois?" you laugh. "Impossible!"
Well, that impossible dream is about to become reality. Illinois will have muskie fishing ... this year ... at Lake Shelbyville.
The miracle workers are two dedicated organizations — the National

Outdoors

Jim Cook

Muskie Assn. and Musky Hunters Inc. — who have biologically researched the feasibility of planting muskies in Illinois and are convinced their project will succeed.
"Project Illini" is seeking to raise $17,000 to purchase and stock 5,500 muskellunge fingerlings into the 11,100 surface acres of water in Lake Shelbyville.
"It can be done," National Muskie Assn. president Bill Bryzik stated earlier this week. "Many people believe that muskies need a cold-water habitat, but our research over the past two years indicated that they can survive in warm water, too."
"There's an abundant supply of forage fish," Gryzik continued, "like silverside shad and gizzard shad and very adequate weed cover. We don't, however, expect them to propagate."

The project would have to be resumed every other year on a put-take basis.
Spring Lake in Tazewell County served as a premature guinea pig for muskie stocking in 1968 when 65 were released. Since then, a 25-pounder has been taken by rod and reel to create a new category in Illinois fishing annals.
The exotic, but poor-eating savage brawler is a very expensive commodity. Each 6-8 inch fingerling will cost $3, but in the two and one-half years it will take the muskellunge to mature and reach legal size, the cost would seem minimal.
"The state would adopt fishing regulations that are very comparable to Wisconsin," Gryzik said. "The bag limit would be one fish at least 30 inches long."
"For this program to succeed, we have to have the full cooperation of the public. We have to make them aware that if they get an undersized muskie, it has to be released unharmed."
"Project Illini" will encompass the releasing of half pure-bred muskellunge and half hybrids. It is known that hybrids possess a faster growth rate, but the mixture may stimulate reproduction.
"The water level is very significant in muskie propagation," Gryzik said. "We're not blessed with the natural growth and reproduction environment of some of the lakes in Wisconsin, Minnesota or Canada. The chance for muskie reproduction in Lake Shelbyville is only about five per cent."
The project is facing a rapidly approaching deadline May 31 when a commitment to order muskie fingerlings must be made.
"We've raised about $6,000 so far," Gryzik said, "and we plan to go ahead with whatever capital we have at that time."
Any person or groups that wish to contribute to "Project Illini" are asked to send a tax-deductible donation of $5 or more to Terry Tassi, 5512 W. 127th St., Palos Heights, Ill. 60463. Receipts and handsome patches will be returned to each supporter.
Here's a golden opportunity for anglers to stop dreaming about muskies in Illinois and to start catching them.

ILLINOISANS will be happy to break a landing net for a chance to tie into a tackle-breaking muskie. The stocking of 5,500 muskellunge fingerlings is scheduled later this summer in Lake Shelbyville.

Lake Michigan under lake trout ban July 1

Outdoor Editor

Tony Dean, director of the Illinois Department of Conservation, has taken the initiative to preserve the populations of lake trout, yellow perch and bloater chub from their native waters of Lake Michigan.
In a statement issued Tuesday, Dean announced strict new commercial and sport fishing regulations for the three fish to safeguard their existence and prevent over-exploitation.
In what perhaps will prove to be an unpopular measure to individuals who rely on the commercial taking of these fish, Dean banned the catching of lake trout by hook and line anglers for at least one year, effective July 1, 1976.
At the same time, he limited the commercial taking of yellow perch and bloater chub to a maximum of three active, full-time eligible fishery crews who will be permitted to take a total of 431,000 pounds of yellow perch and 39,000 pounds of bloater chub on an annual basis. The effective date is also July 1, 1976.

"I feel it is necessary to institute these regulations in order to insure the future health of both sport and commercial fisheries of Lake Michigan," Dean said in a prepared statement.
Both Michigan and Wisconsin are expected to adopt similar regulations.
The new measures were based on recommendations made by the Great Lakes Fishery Commission's special Chub Technical Committee.
The lake trout ban will hopefully re-establish a natural breeding population. While brown and rainbow trout are still legal gamefish, the lakers will be protected to help encourage propagation which has fallen sharply and stabilized at a disappointing low of approximately 100,000 pounds of commercial production since 1950.

In the same vein, a continuing scientific fish census in the lake, conducted by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, has revealed a drastic decline in the numbers of bloater chub.
Yellow perch, although not in danger of extinction, has taken a steady down-turn in numbers for several years. The declines reflect ecological pressures, which, combined with commercial exploitation, are rapidly diminishing the two-fish species, according to Dean.
"The regulations may be unpopular," the director concluded, "but the alternative is to stand by and allow another irreplaceable resource to be lost on account of mismanagement. I won't let that happen."

May 24-26	—Chicagoland Dressage Horse Show, the largest metropolitan area dressage competition, at International Harvester Research Center in Hinsdale.
May 24	—Michigan black bass opener in all waters except Lake St. Clair and the St. Clair and Detroit rivers where the season starts June 23.

Bass prove to be shady characters

Novice anglers often are confused about how water clarity in any given lake or stream affects largemouth bass fishing.
The clarity of the water determines how deep the light can penetrate under water, and has a direct effect on where fish can be found.
Studies are shown bass will forsake comfortable temperatures and seek deeper water to avoid light because they have no eyelids to protect their sensitive eyes.
In place of deep water, largemouth bass will seek the security of the shady side of cover, such as a log or rock, where they can escape the light.
Water clarity and light conditions, then, should be a starting key to the novice angler as to where he can begin looking for fish.
The beginner often wonders why fishing on bright, sunny days seems poorer than on cloudy, overcast days.

On bright days, light will be reaching its maximum penetration under clear water conditions. Obviously, the angler should not be looking for bass in shallows under such conditions, unless he is attempting to pick up scattered fish hiding on the shady sides of logs or other structure.
In order to escape the light, largemouth bass may congregate in deeper water which may be colder than ideal 72-degree active temperatures. Although largemouth bass can be comfortable in waters as low as 5 degrees, the cooler the water, the less active they are and therefore more difficult to catch.
Scattered fish can always be picked up in shallows near good structure, but schooled bass will head for deeper water to find the right light conditions. An exception, of course, is when bass school in the shallows under moss beds or other heavy weed patches to escape bright light.
Also, in the spring, largemouth bass can always be found in the shallows because of the spawning season, but again they will seek out good cover.
If they don't have the protection of shade, bass prefer depths where the light penetration is about five per cent, and anglers can purchase light meters which will provide a reading.
The angler also can follow the old method of taking a white lure and lowering it into the water until he can no longer see it. By measuring the length of the line where he last saw the lure and multiplying it by two, he can come up with the proper depth. In other words, if the lure went out of sight at five feet, the angler should be looking for bass in 10 feet of water.

However, not just any 10 feet of water will produce fish. The angler still must consider structure, and if he can afford it, a meter to read temperature and oxygen content of the water.
By combining the best of light, structure, oxygen and temperature conditions, the angler can come up with a winning combination.
The water clarity will change throughout the day with the light, and the angler should check conditions frequently.

Girls make state track bids in four districts

Four Herald area high schools will be hosting girls' district track and field meets today. The sites and times are as follows:

Conant — 9 a.m. preliminaries and semifinals; finals at 12:30 p.m.

Prospect — 9 a.m. field and 10 a.m. track events; finals at 1 p.m.

Rolling Meadows — 9 a.m. field and 10:30 a.m. track; field finals at 1 p.m. and track finals at 1:30 p.m.

Stovenson — 11 a.m. field and noon track events with finals to follow.

Besides athletes who finish first or second, those contestants who place third, fourth or fifth and equal or better the state standards will earn berths at next weekend's state finals in Charleston.

Two girls will be trying to qualify so that they can defend state titles. Prospect's Trudi Rebsamen won the 220 and 440. Only two other girls were double winners in '74.

Also winning last year was Conant's Mary Ann Johnson in the shot put. Maine East's Melody Miller won the 880-yard run, but she will compete in the mile and two-mile events.

PROSPECT DISTRICT

Rebsamen and teammate Cindy Devero are expected to do well for Prospect. Devero excels in the 110 hurdles.

Forest View's Rene Gromke also specializes in both the 110 and 88 hurdles. Karen Terp has a good shot in the high jump as does the 880 relay team.

Elk Grove will also be competing at Prospect.

CONANT DISTRICT

The Cougars will be hosting their third straight district under manager Barb Bostlan. Conant's Johnson fig-

Gillespie leading St. Viator threat

It's all on the line today for St. Viator track star Mike Gillespie when the Lions visit Marist for the Suburban Catholic League track and field championships.

Gillespie, a senior, is rated the man to beat in the 440-yard dash. He and his St. Viator teammates will be trying to uphold the Lions' honor in the finals.

"He should win," said Viator head coach Jim Lyne. "At least I think so. If the weather is good, on a fast track Mike could run around :50.6."

Gillespie's best this season is :51.0, which is outstanding considering the fact that he has run mostly on cinder tracks. The :51 flat was run on an all-weather surface at Forest View.

"Mike is just starting to come into his own," said Lyne.

Joining Gillespie in the quarter-mile will be Lion teammate Jack Gracheck, a junior who has turned a :52.0 clocking after recovering from a back ailment and a week without training in Washington, D.C.

"Jack ran the 100 and the 220 for us as a sophomore," said Viator assistant Tom Coover. "And he was conference sophomore champ in the 440 last year."

"Jack and Mike train together — they push each other," continued Coover. "They both do good jobs and they're both very dedicated kids."

Another St. Viator runner with a chance to place in the conference meet is two-miler Spencer Williams, whose best time this season is 9:53.

All three Lion trackmen will look to the district meet at Prospect when the league finals are history. The state meet will be the culmination of a long, grueling year to St. Viator's runners, who don't have the benefit of either a home track or an indoor season.

"Over the Easter vacation we used tracks at Hersey and Palatine," Coover said. "Those people were very nice. But since then we've used our parking lot and the field, and we've got a strip that we've measured off for the 100 and the 220. It's been rough."

But despite the lack of facilities, Gillespie and his mates have made big strides this season. Especially Gillespie.

"I feel he is going to win," said Coover. "He's confident but not cocky. It'll be a good contest, but if somebody pushes him he could run a really good time."

That "somebody" could be Gracheck. "Jack has been overlooked lately because of his injury," said Coover, "but he's been coming on. You know, anything could happen."

Lyne and Coover also anticipate a good showing from the Lions' freshman brigade.

Sweep in VFW golf

Premier Electric was unbeatable in the VFW golf League as it blanked its opposition, 24-0 to capture sole possession of first place. There were eight birdies registered with Chuck Grom getting two on the 12th and 14th holes and Ed Wells a pair on the 12th and 13th.

Other birdies were recorded by Otto Helman on the third, Don Markus and Darryl Burkett on the 11th and Harold Koelling on the 18th.

Meadows perfect in track

Rolling Meadows finished the dual meet portion of the Mid-Suburban Conference with a perfect track and field record of 12-0 Thursday by defeating Forest View, the defending champ, 83-45 and Elk Grove 105-15.

The Meadows Mustangs will be trying to take the team title on Tuesday at the league meet hosted by Palatine. Half the title is determined by the duels.

Three Mustang performers also finished with perfect records. Chris Gallis in the 50 and 100 dash events, Maureen Stoll in the discus and Char Anderson in the 880 run.

Gallis took the 50 in 6.4 and the 100 in 11.6 as one of Meadows' trio of double winners Thursday. Stoll won the discus (102-5) and shot put (35-3½) with Anderson coming through in the 440 (1:04.4) and 880 (2:36).

Rene Gromke won the 110 (18.0) and 80 (11.8) hurdles as the Falcon of Forest View stopped Elk Grove 103-24.

Wheeling defeated Prospect 73-59 and Hersey 81-50 as Gail Miloch set a record in the mile run with 5:37. She also took the 880 in 2:30.3, just 1/10th of a second off the record.

Wheeling's 880 relay team also set a new league mark with 1:51.4.

Prospect stopped Hersey in the other dual meet, 70-62.

Bev Bldio of Conant tied the MSC mark in the 50 yard dash with 6.2 as the Cougars defeated Fremd 69-63. Fremd beat Hoffman 67-55 and Hoffman stopped Conant 67-64. Hoffman's Laura Buddenbaum was a double winner, taking the long jump in 14-10 and the 80 hurdles in 11.4.

EXECUTIVE RECRUITER ENTRY LEVEL

We aren't going to tell you a lot of different stories about how easy the job is or that you can make $25,000 in your first year. What we are going to say is — if you want a job that offers hard work, a job with a challenge, a job with a future, a job where you can earn from $12-$15,000 the first year, then a discussion of your future and our business would be worthwhile. We promise nothing but hard work, long hours, and self-achieved monetary rewards. If you have a sincere desire to succeed and the aggressiveness to achieve results then you're the type of person we would like to talk to. Please call Mr. Stanton at 392-2525

Lilac festival on despite cold

Mother Nature, despite unseasonably cold temperatures, is trying to assert herself in Lombard. The annual lilac festival is under way in that village even though it began without a lilac in bloom.

Though buds were still tight the middle of this week, Mitchel Katnik, superintendent of parks for the Lombard Park District, said he expects 1300 bushes in Lilacia Park to put on their lavender finery in time for Mother's Day Sunday and continue through the following weekend for the annual Lilac Parade May 18.

Lilacia Park covers almost 8½ acres and often is referred to as the "lilac capital of the Midwest." There are more than 275 varieties of lilac ranging in colors from white to deep purple.

IN ADDITION Lilacia Park is noted for its rows of tulips planted in winding border beds.

The theme of the May 18 lilac parade is "Nostalgia, U.S.A. — the '30s, '40s and '50s." It is part of a three-year series of parade themes set with the Bicentennial celebration in mind. Close to 100 units will focus on past eras as they proceed down Main Street beginning at 2:30 p.m.

Special this year will be the Schlitz 40-horse hitch and the Medinah Black Horse Troop.

Although picnicking is not allowed in Lilacia Park, the suburb does feature parks where families can relax and cook out. A guide to these parks and a schedule of activities for the entire festival is available through the Park District Office of Lombard, 627-1281.

SEVERAL CHURCHES in the area are providing food service. The Calvary Episcopal Church is serving a special roast beef dinner Sunday in honor of Mother's Day from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Admission to Lilacia Park is 50 cents for nonresidents of Lombard. Young people under 18, servicemen and clergy are admitted free.

The Lombard Historical Museum, located across from the park, will feature special guided tours of its facilities during the festival. Depicted will be the lifestyle of a middle-income family in 1869, the year the village was first incorporated.

No primrose paths for cyclists

by KAREN BLECHA

To many people taking life easy means taking it on two wheels. That means a bicycle and once you've got that there's only one problem: where to ride it.

If you own a bike, like trails and live in the Northwest suburbs you've got two choices. You can load the cycle on a bike rack and drive to trails in places like Chicago, the North Shore or Wisconsin. Or you can ride one of the four bike routes in the Northwest suburbs.

Palatine, Elk Grove Village, Des Plaines and Arlington Heights now have bike routes. Palatine is the only trail for bicycles only. The other paths consist of village and city streets marked by bike-route signs.

As far as scenery goes, the Palatine trail built by the Palatine Park District is the best. Blacktopped and wide enough for two bicycles the 4.7-mile trail winds its way through Commonwealth Edison Co. property, along Salt Creek, across Hicks and Smith roads, onto the Palatine Hills Golf Course and stops short of the Deer Grove Forest Preserve on Quentin Road.

THE ROUTE begins in a peaceful residential area on Anderson and Winston drives, winds its way by a retention pond and for a mile or two all you see are backyards with gas grills. After Hicks Road the sites get better as the trail passes by fields and runs through woods as it circles the golf course. The last part of the trail also offers some fairly steep hills and curves so you may have to use your brakes.

For the most part the trail is well route signs. But at Hicks Road the trail seems to end because that section is still incomplete. Palatine Park District officials plan to build an underpass for the trail there this summer when the road is widened.

Until then, a rider can pick up the trail by crossing Hicks Road, going right and then left down E. Carpenter Drive. At the end of the street the trail starts again in a field on the left.

There are some drawbacks to the trail. At its start there is no parking lot for a car if you drive and you must find a spot on the side street. At Smith Road cyclists must fend for themselves with car traffic. And although the trail is basically well-maintained, on a recent ride there were bits of broken glass in several sections.

Eventually the trail, which park district attorney Roger Bjorvik estimates will cost near $200,000, will run into the Deer Grove Forest Preserve. When the Illinois Highway Dept. widens Dundee Road, an overpass for the trail will be built. Then the Cook County Forest Preserve District plans to complete the trail inside the forest preserve.

Because the three other bikeways run along streets — a rider must keep alert to watch for the green and white signs marking the route. Scenery is the same as you would see by car. And like other routes, these paths also have some bad street crossings where the cyclists must fend for himself.

ELK GROVE Village was the pioneer for this kind of trail. Village officials and local bike nuts there started talking bike path in the late '60s when the big bike boom first hit — a boom so big that for the last three years bikes have outsold cars.

CYCLISTS, like motorists, must obey stop signs along bike routes.

ARLINGTON HEIGHTS bikers must contend with traffic at Miner Street and Arlington Heights Road.

He's an architect for the animals

by LUISA GINETTI

William Ring is a model builder who happens to like animals. Considering these two facts, it's not hard to understand how Ring got involved in becoming one of the country's few zoo model-makers.

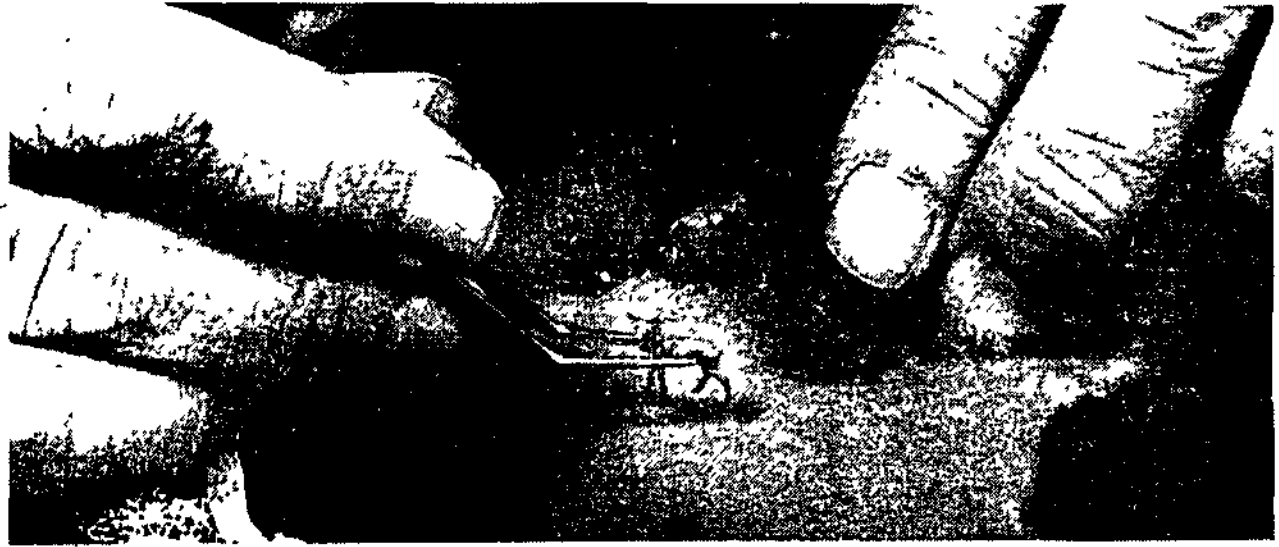

Ring, 1876 Bonnet Pl., Des Plaines, has made more than 60 models for zoos across the country including Lincoln Park Zoo in Chicago and Brookfield Zoo.

"I'm interested in zoos and animals and that's how I got into it," Ring said of his more than eight years' work at building models for animal moats and outdoor pens. "Zoo models are more challenging because they are all different. The landscaping in each case has to be different for each animal because of their different environments."

RING'S FIRST zoo model was commissioned eight years ago by a planning firm in Winnetka which was hired to draw a master plan for Brookfield Zoo. He was hired to make a model to go with the master plan and from then on, Ring was hooked on zoo-building projects.

He has also built models of master plans for the Indianapolis Zoo, the Minnesota State Zoo, which is now under construction, and the Atlanta Zoo. In addition he is responsible for constructing models of a new outdoor pen for Brookfield's famous Indian elephant Ziggy and the new Lincoln Park Zoo ape house, which is under construction.

The models and accompanying movie which Ring made for the state of Minnesota were instrumental in selling the idea of building a state zoo to legislators and residents. The multi-million dollar facility to be located on 400 acres near St. Paul is being built and Ring said because of its size a monorail system will circle the zoo allowing visitors to view animals in their natural habitat.

RING SAID THE time it takes him to build a zoo model varies depending on the amount of work involved in it. He makes his own scale-model animals in different sizes, rock formations and other landscaping materials which are then carefully glued onto a cork base. Ring also paints all the fixtures himself.

Sometimes Ring's wife and four children lend a hand in his work. His daughters are handy at making trees and Ring said the entire family took part in making the movie to accompany the Minnesota state zoo model.

Post office at Galena new landmark

Assistant Treasury Sec. David R. MacDonald will commemorate the Galena Post Office building in Galena as an Historic Customhouse, at a ceremony at 1 p.m. Sunday, May 18. The event will take place in front of the building at Commerce and Green streets, and coincides with the fourth annual U.S. Grant Civil War Centennial.

The ceremony also marks the 186th anniversary of the U. S. Customs Service, established by the Second and Fifth Acts of the First Congress in 1789.

The Historic Customhouse program is one of U. S. Customs' bicentennial era activities. The program, which is in keeping with federal efforts to accelerate historic preservation, identifies U. S. Customhouses of historic or architectural merit. The ceremony will be the 21st in a continuing program that began in July 1971.

The Galena Customhouse was authorized and appropriated for by an Act of Congress approved in 1856, with a supplemental appropriation for its completion authorized in 1858. Constructed of limestone from Nauvoo, Illinois, the building is significant for the richness of its window frames, the austerity of its wall surfaces, and the restrained use of decorative elements. Ely S. Parker, a full-blooded Iroquois Indian and a Major General on U. S. Grant's staff during the Civil War, was superintendent of construction.

GLASS-BLOWN figures were on sale at the Gem and Mineral Show at the Countryside Mall, Palatine, last week. Experts demonstrated glass-blowing, polishing and setting stone and silversmithing at the four-day show.

High-flying fun at airport open house next week

Airplane rides, aircraft displays and a balloon ascension are among events scheduled at Schaumburg Airport's second annual open house May 16, 17 and 18 at the airport, W. Irving Park Road.

Activities will begin Friday when airplane rides, at 3 cents per pound of passengers weight, will be offered, along with aircraft, pilots supplies and avionics equipment which will be on display from noon to 10 p.m.

A balloon ascension, skydiving, hang gliders and airplane rides will be featured Saturday, May 17 from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., followed by an awards dinner dance, with cocktails at 6:30 p.m., followed by dinner at 7:30 p.m. Tickets for the dinner dance can be purchased at the airport flight office or from members of the Schaumburg Pilots Assn.

The pilots' association will sponsor a fly-in breakfast from 8 a.m. to noon Sunday, May 18, followed by a spot landing contest.

Festivals, concerts to dramatize state's history

Illinois' heritage will be celebrated during the next two years with more than 100 festivals, concerts, recreational outings and historic recreations at various state parks.

The Illinois Heritage Days program, part of the state's national Bicentennial plans, is sponsored by the Dept. of Conservation with Tony Dean as director.

The program consists of more than 20 major two-day events to be held on weekends, 80 one-day events and two major historic recreations, each more than two weeks in length. It focuses on the entire spectrum of Illinois history, from the Indians before Columbus' day to the turn of the 20th century.

ONE OF THE two-day events is the Fort de Chartres Rendezvous. The fort, south of St. Louis along the Mississippi River near the village of Prairie du Rocher, was the seat of civil and military government for the French in America's interior during the 1700s. The fort was distinguished for being the first site in the New World where men and women both had the right to vote. It has been partially reconstructed, and archaeological digging continues at the site.

During the modern "Rendezvous," an authentic French colonial life and drum corps "occupies" the fort and fires the 18th Century cannon, while buckskinners in authentic costume fire muskets, throw tomahawks and race 35-foot Voyageur canoes. Colonial craftsmen demonstrate blacksmithing, woodworking and furniture-making, candlemaking, spinning and the baking of bread in an outdoor oven.

Other two-day events include the Turn of the Century celebration at Siloam Springs State Park, east of Quincy, and the Jordbrukdagarna, a traditional Swedish harvest festival, at Bishop Hill State Memorial, southwest of Kewanee.

History of both sites is interesting; Siloam Springs was an exclusive health spa, with mineral springs, in the period of the late 1800s, while Bishop Hill was an agricultural commune founded in 1840 by a group of Swedish immigrants who fled to the United States seeking religious freedom.

THE ONE-DAY Illinois Heritage Days events are planned to cover a broad spectrum, including such occurrences as the Grand Levee at the old Vandalia State House. The "grand evening" was a traditional French colonial recognition of the first day of summer. The ringing of the Kaskaskia bell, which George Rogers Clark called the "Liberty Bell of the West," at Fort Kaskaskia Bell Memorial, south of Belleville, is a favorite Fourth of July tradition.

A special aspect of the Heritage Days series will come during the Christmas holiday season, when four two-day events, a one-day observance and even a Christmas morning service are planned to help celebrate various frontier yuletide traditions.

The historic recreations planned include the George Rogers Clark trek in June 1976, Lincoln's Eighth Judicial Circuit ride in September 1976; and the Illinois segment of LaSalle's second expedition.

The George Rogers Clark trek was the only American Revolutionary War action which took place in Illinois. The re-creation will trace Clark's path through southern Illinois, in which several British-held forts and settlements were captured "in the name of General George Washington."

COMMENCING with the "capture" of Fort Massac June 27, 1976, the trek will follow the original route taken by Clark, with the party arriving at Kaskaskia July 4. On this date, a one-day event will be held at the Pierre Menard Home to welcome the travelers. On July 5, the party will leave for Prairie du Rocher, and will "take" Fort de Chartres July 9.

Clark and his men will stay at Fort de Chartres during the 1976 "Rendezvous," July 10 and 11, and then continue their trek toward Cahokia, where they are scheduled to arrive July 15. On July 17, a one-day event will be held at the Cahokia Court House.

Lincoln's Eighth Judicial Circuit ride will take place in the area between Danville and Metamora during a two-week period. An actor representing Abraham Lincoln will ride a horse into all of the 15 major cities and towns where Lincoln practiced law during the decade before he became President. While at these sites, Lincoln will greet the people, talk about what is happening on the prairie and discuss some of his most famous court cases. In towns where the old courthouses still stand, Lincoln will take part in reenacted trials of the period.

Dean said that Illinois is among the foremost states in the nation in terms of historic significance, and also in the existence of physical sites which epitomize or highlight cultural history.

For information on the program write to the Dept. of Conservation, Springfield, Ill.

Roads are rocky for cyclists

In 1970 the village officially opened a 20-mile route that winds its way through the town. The route is marked by signs only in one direction so a biker must ride east to west if they want to ride the trail. Plans call for eventually hooking up the trail to the bike path that is being planned by the forest preserve district in Busse Woods.

Des Plaines followed Elk Grove Village in 1973 with a route of 16.7 miles. The trail is well marked in both directions although it is interrupted in certain parts because the state highway department does not allow signs posted on their roads.

Arlington Heights finally got its bike route signs in 1974. Shorter than the other routes, the trail is restricted to the central part of the village between Northwest Highway and Rand Road. The route took more than two years of negotiating between police and cyclists and is a compromise between a recreational route and the safest streets for bikers.

WHILE MANY cyclists admit the bike route on the street may not be the best for recreational riding, they do say putting up signs gives bike riders a purpose, shows them the village and marks the safest street for them to follow.

"It would have been nice in the '30s if officials drew a line and said this is the bike trail and you build your subdivisions around it," said Roger Bjorvik who has been working to set up bike trails in north-eastern Illinois.

"You work with what you have. These types of bike trails are destination oriented. If a child says, 'Mommy I'm going to the park,' she can say he sure to take the bike trail," he said.

Morgan Groves, executive director of the League of American Wheelman, which has national offices in Palatine, said he prefers bike routes on streets rather than separate bike paths.

"In many cases car traffic is easier to deal with than bike traffic," he said. He said often on separate bikeways bikers stop and park their bikes on the trail and ride so they block bikers coming in the other direction.

NONE OF the four trails in the north-west suburbs connect and it is impossible to ride from town to town on a bike route. But park district, village officials and regional planners are working on it. Plans for bikeways are on the drawing boards in Mount Prospect, Hoffman Estates, Schaumburg and Buffalo Grove.

The Northwestern Illinois Planning Commission is working on a proposal for a network of bike trails throughout the area. The trail system would be used for transportation and recreation and is being studied by a NIPC committee chaired by Bjorvik, a Palatine resident.

The committee has drawn up a map designating areas for potential bike trails in a six-county area around Chicago. It is conducting a survey of residents and commuters in Arlington Heights, Elk Grove Village, Hoffman Estates, Hanover Park, Schaumburg, Roselle, Rolling Meadows, Mount Prospect and Palatine to determine if there is a need for a regional bike path in the Woodfield area. A meeting on the proposal will be held at 7:30 p.m. May 29 in Schaumburg's Great Hall.

"Our job is to give assistance to communities planning bike trails and to coordinate them," Bjorvik said. "We want to identify corridors where people want to ride."

NIPC supplies the technical assistance but no funds. Bjorvik mentioned village, park district and township monies as possibilities. He said for a regional trail several towns could accept its share of the cost for the portion within its boundaries. Another

Getting away from it all . . . by bicycle

For bike riders who decide they want to get away from it all, here is a list of trails nearby and in Wisconsin:

• Salt Creek Forest Preserve Trail — this six-mile trail near Western Springs and LaGrange Park runs from Bemis Woods near the Tri-State Tollway and Ogden Avenue to Brookfield Zoo.

• North Branch Forest Preserve Trail — this 10-mile trail begins in the forest preserve near Devon and Touhy Avenues in Chicago and runs north through Niles, Morton Grove and Glenview.

• Green Bay Bike Trail — the trail runs along the North Shore by the Chicago and North Western Railway tracks. The trail starts at Winnetka Road in Winnetka and runs through Glencoe to Highland Park.

• The New Glarus Ride, near New Glarus in Southern Wisconsin — the 13-mile Sugar River State Trail is made of crushed rock on an old railroad bed and runs through the countryside around New Glarus. The area has been settled by Amish and riders will see horse-drawn buggies and plows and men in dark clothes with long beards. Bikers also can camp near New Glarus.

• Southern Kettle Moraine Ride, near Whitewater, Wis. — a 13-mile main trail and a 29-mile alternate winds its way through the forests of the Kettle Moraine where bikers can camp, swim and hike. The trail runs by both Whitewater and Rice lakes.

• Spring Valley Ride, near Madison, Wis. — about 15 miles away from Madison, the 20-mile trail near the Blackhawk Ridge Recreation Area runs through woods and marsh and over rolling farmlands of Cross Plains, Wis. Riders pass the site of the battle of Wisconsin Heights, which took place during an Indian war in 1832. Swimming and camping nearby.

• Elroy-Sparta State Trail, southern Wisconsin — also called "the Old Railroad Trail," the 32 miles of surfaced railroad bed passes under three tunnels and over 33 trestles as it winds through the rural countryside.

For more information on bike trails and how to get there write League of American Wheelman, 19 S. Bothwell, Palatine.

possibility is using money from the motor fuel tax for bike trails if the current controversy over that plan is resolved.

MARCY CASCINO, NIPC assistant planner who is working on the bike network, said building a separate trail for bikes can cost from $15,000 a mile to $60,000 a mile. She said progress on bike routes has been so slow because money has been tight.

"There is no question that progress has been slow but I'm sure it's going to come," Bjorvik said. "Bicycle riding has been almost totally recreation oriented. It doesn't have the sense of immediacy winter problems have."

Groves said if he were planning bike paths in the Northwest suburbs, he would build them as a means for cyclists to get around streets that are heavily traveled by cars.

"One of the League of American Wheelman's basic principles is the right of the cyclist to use the road," Groves said. "I'm not criticizing bike paths, but a cyclist does not want to be restricted to bike paths only."

He said he favors drawing up maps for the area that would mark the safest streets for riders.

Chicago's first exclusive exhibit of photographs by the Earl of Snowdon, husband to Princess Margaret of England, debuts at Exchange National Bank of Chicago, La Salle and Adams, May 21.

The exhibit spans Lord Snowdon's 20-year career in photography. The 100 photographs highlight Lord Snowdon's achievements as a photo-journalist, social commentator and color essayist. Included are portraits of Igor Stravinsky, Sir Lawrence Olivier, Sir Alec Guinness and the Royal Family.

The Snowdon exhibit will continue through June 27 on the bank's main and upper floors. It is open to the public, at no charge, during regular banking hours:

Monday and Friday, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.; Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Born Anthony Armstrong-Jones in 1930, Lord Snowdon was a recognized and successful photographer before his marriage to Princess Margaret in 1960. His photographs have been featured in international periodicals including "Vogue," "Life," "Look," "McCall's," "London Sunday Times" and "Paris Match." Lord Snowdon has authored five books of photography and has directed television documentaries for which he received six international awards including two Emmys. He serves as artistic advisor to the "London Sunday Times."

Youth theater at Woodfield Sunday

The Center Youth Theater, scheduled to perform in Chicago schools, at Ravinia's Fourth of July celebration and throughout the state this summer, will make its debut Sunday at Woodfield Shopping Center.

The group has presented the historical play, "Mackinac," at the Bernard Horwich Jewish Community Center where it is based and has been performing quality children's theater for 13 years. This summer marks the group's first performances outside the Horwich Center.

Entertainers will present a "warm up" at 11 a.m. with the show beginning at 11:30 a.m. There is no admission charge.

34 state parks to offer summer study programs

SPRINGFIELD, ILL., — Interpretive recreational, historical or nature study programs will be offered this summer at 34 Illinois Dept. of Conservation properties, conservation director Tony Dean announced.

The annual summer programs, inaugurated in 1970 at six sites and expanded to 29 by last year, are free, open to all visitors and will be conducted from June 14 - Sept. 1 by the Conservation Department's Parks and Memorials staff. Interpretive recreational activities are slated at 27 sites, historical programs at three others and nature study at four more.

Dean said the interpretive-recreational program seeks to develop environmental and historical awareness with the help of such craft activities as candlemaking, pottery, leather working, insect observation, and making plaster of paris moulds of natural objects or fossils. Interpretive walks, canoe rides, aquatic studies and forest ecology study also are planned.

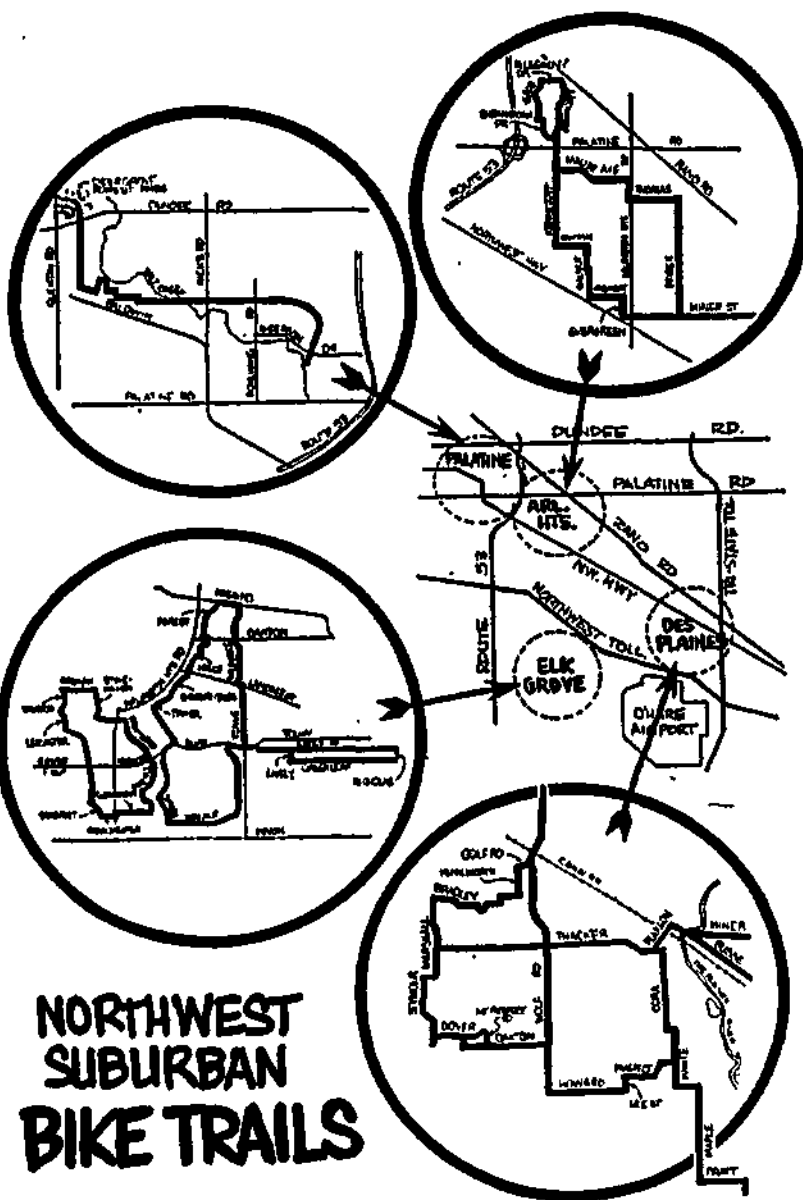

Nature study and historical programs consist primarily of tours, site background orientation, and explanation of historical or environmental significance. No other recreational activities are included.

Hours may vary slightly from site-to-site, but in most parks the schedule will be from 8 or 8:30 to 5 or 5:30 p.m., Dean said. In addition, some sites also will offer special evening sessions, featuring films or slides, campfire programs, singing, dancing and other activities suitable as family entertainment.

Activities are slated Wednesday through Sunday at 28 parks, memorials or nature preserves. "Weekend-only" programs are offered at the remaining six.

State parks with five-day interpretive-recreational programs are: Ferne Clyffe, near Goreville; Ramsey Lake, Fayette County; Red Hills, west of Lawrenceville; Frank Holton, E. St. Louis; Pere Marquette, near Alton; Jubilee College, northwest of Peoria; Siloam Springs, WILLIAM RING makes almost every piece of equipment used in his zoo models from the small scale animals and people to the trees and rocks that comprise the landscaping. Making zoo models is a stimulating challenge architecturally because all zoos are different, the model-maker said.

Also: Argyle Lake, near Colchester; Johnson-Sauk Trail, eastern Henry County; Lake Le-Aqua-Na, Stephenson County; Lowden Memorial State Park, northeast of Oregon; Mississippi Palisades, near Savanna; Rock Cut, north of Rockford; Starved Rock, near Ottawa; and White Pines, Ogle County.

Five-day nature programs are scheduled at Volo Bog, Heron Pond, and Lusk Creek Nature Preserves and at Goose Lake Prairie State Park. Wednesday through Sunday historical programming is planned at Fort de Chartres and Lincoln's New Salem.

Activities are scheduled for weekends only at: Eldon Hazlet, Spring Lake, Fox Ridge, Weldon Springs, and Illini State Parks (Interpretive-recreational), and at Moore Home State Memorial.

Animal architecture more than hobby for Ring

we finished," Ring said.

The time involved in this process was lengthy, Ring said. In contrast, his work on building a model for the Atlanta Zoo took only 16 hours.

RING SAID HE and his family have visited almost every zoo in the West and Southwest United States and have met with many zoo directors and officials on these trips as well as through Ring's membership in the American Assn. of Zoological Parks and Aquariums.

"We have an education that nobody else gets because when we visit these zoos we're treated like VIPs and get to see many of the behind the scenes things no one else can," Ring said.

Ring, who teaches model-making at Triton College in River Grove, said he is concerned about the future of zoos because of recently enacted federal legislation which restricts and in some cases prohibits the sale or shipping of animals across state lines.

"THE LAWS ARE making it difficult for zoos to trade animals with each other and I think unless something is done to change this, in 10 years only the bigger zoos will be around and we'll only have about half the number we have now."

Ring said he will continue to work to help zoos in their struggle to survive and hopes to get more jobs working with zoo officials and architects in building models for both new zoos and improvements to existing zoos.

"Designing zoos is a challenge for me because they are architecturally different than other things I have worked on," Ring said. "Architecturally, everything that can be done with a rectangle has been done, but with zoos it's always different, it's always a challenge and it's stimulating."

New popular issues from Puerto Rico

Costa Rica recently issued the third series in the popular Conservation Coin Collection. This unique numismatic venture sponsored by the World Wildlife Fund involves 24 participating countries over a four-year period. Three new coins, one gold and two silver of the same size and weight are released as legal tender every two months by one of the participating countries.

The coins are minted in limited numbers to the most exact specifications in both proof and uncirculated condition.

The Costa Rica gold coin, 34 millimeters in diameter, with the Greater Antelope on its reverse side, is issued at 1,500 Colones. The large silver coin, 42 millimeters in diameter and valued at 100 Colones, features the Manatee, the fast disappearing sea cow which according to legend sailors have often been mistaken as the mythical mermaid.

THE SMALLER silver coin, 38 millimeters in diameter and valued at 50 Colones, shows the Green Turtle. All three coins have the Costa Rican National Coat of Arms on their obverse.

Spink and Sons Ltd., London, England, the world's oldest numismatic authority, is managing the

Collecting coins by Mort Reed

Conservation Coin Collection. The coins are minted and designed at the Royal Mint in London.

The first issue in the collection was released by the Bank of Indonesia last October. Tanzania released the second issue in December but the Indonesian silver coins were a complete sell-out world-wide.

Proceeds from the sale of these coins go to World Wildlife Fund International. The World Wildlife Fund appeals with the countries that are selling the coins, and the conservation departments of the participating issuing nations.

The Standard Catalog of World Paper Money by Albert Pick has just been released for sale to the public by the co-publishers, Krause Publications of Iola, Wis., and Ernst Battenberg Verlag of Munich, West Germany.

The new catalog is extremely comprehensive and includes the paper money of 249 countries. More than 4,000 previously unpublished photographs of paper currency have been utilized in illustrating the catalog. Paper money covered by the STANDARD CATALOG OF WORLD PAPER MONEY includes all government issues of the world since 1900 plus many more popular issues. Over 20,000 notes are listed by date including current market values. There are 720 pages in the catalog.

ALBERT PICK is the curator of the extensive paper money collections of the Bavarian Mortgage and Exchange Bank of Munich and is the author of "European Paper Money Since 1910," "Paper Money Catalogue of the Americas," "Papiergeld Sammelin" (Paper Money Collecting) and other works.

Distribution of the English language edition will be handled by Krause Publications for the United States and all other English speaking countries. European distribution will be handled by Battenberg Verlag.

Krause Publications, headed by Chester L. Krause, is a leader in the field of coin collecting publications and produces the Standard Catalog of World Coins as well as periodicals Numismatic News Weekly, Coins Magazine, Coin Prices and World Coin News.

The Standard Catalog of World Paper Money sells for $15, and may be purchased from local coin shops and book stores or direct from the publisher.

Three Canadian humanitarians honored in commemoratives

Canadian humanitarians Marguerite Bourgeoys, Alphonse Desjardins, John Cook and Samuel Chown will each be honored May 30 with the release of four 8-cent commemorative stamps.

Bourgeoys founded the Order of Notre Dame; Desjardins was a leader of the credit union movement; Cook was the first moderator of the Presbyterian Church in Canada; and Chown was a prime mover in the founding of the United Church of Canada.

Four-color lithography will be used to print 12 million Bourgeoys adhesives and 14 million Desjardins stamps. The Chown-Cook issue of 16 million will be printed set-tenant in two-color gravure and one-color steel. Marginal inscriptions, including the designers' names, appear on the four corners of each pane of 60 stamps in the Bourgeoys and Desjardins issue and on the top and bottom of each pane of 50 stamps in the Chown-Cook issue. The total production will bear general tagging.

Collectors desiring first-day cancellations should send their requests to "Phila-tellie Service, Canada Post Office, Ottawa, Ont., Canada, K1A 0B5" enclosing the proper remittance which is the cost of the stamps to be affixed plus a service fee of 15 cents for each cover affixed with less than 50 cents postage. For the Desjardins issue only, the first day cancellation site will be Lewis, Que., but postal officials will ship those covers in bulk to the first day site.

COMPEX 1975 will issue its third privately printed souvenir card featuring three stamps commemorating Canadian-American friendship — the Migratory Bird Treaty issue of 1966, a Century of Friendship release of 1948 and the St. Lawrence Seaway issue of 1959.

Cards are $1 each at the exhibition May 23, 24 and 25 or by mail from COMPEX 1975, 216 LaSalle Hotel, Chicago, Ill. 60602.

A SPECIALLY postmarked and cacheted envelope is available to collectors marking the opening of the Gem City

Postal Shoppe, Dayton, Ohio.

The Shoppe is the 18th in the Central Region and its opening coincided with first day ceremonies marking the release of the Paul Laurence Dunbar adhesive on May 1.

The envelopes are 35 cents each or three for $1 from Gem City Postal Shoppe, Postmaster, Dayton, Ohio 45401. Please enclose a self-addressed, stamped, No. 10 (long) envelope for return of the cacheted covers.

From cowboy to a soap opera doctor

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Peter Brown, who plays Dr. Greg Peters in the soap opera "Days of Our Lives," arises at 4:30 each morning for a dip in his pool before heading for work.

He guarantees this ritual will clear the sinus passages.

The pre-dawn plunge is not an eccentricity. Peter must report to NBC studios in Burbank by 6 a.m. to rehearse the live-on-tape show. Because the episodes have been lengthened to an hour, he rarely returns home before 6 p.m.

So it's either an early morning swim or none at all.

WHEN HE does arrive at his hearth he is greeted by Jean Karlson, a willowy beauty of Swedish extraction with whom he has lived for almost two years.

They have no intention of getting married, Peter says.

Jean is sufficiently domestic to get up frequently to fix Peter's breakfast after his half-hour dunk in the pool. At other times he skips breakfast at home for bacon and eggs in the studio commissary.

Peter, a native of Brooklyn, became a nut on western clothes when he starred in two western series, "Lawman" and "Laredo." Today he owns only two dress suits. He keeps them at the studio and wears them on the show.

His closets at home are not filled to capacity either. He doesn't own a sports jacket. He has one leather coat, a good many western shirts and a few pairs of blue denim. He wears cowboy boots at all times — except on the tennis courts.

When he isn't bothered by a fractious elbow, Peter enters celebrity tennis tournaments, winning more often than not.

PETER HAS an all-purpose table in the dining room. With the top removed it becomes a bumper pool table. With the top upside down it becomes a poker table.

An inveterate game player, Brown's living room coffee table is a custom-made backgammon table.

Peter is the father of a son, Matthew, 12, by a previous marriage. Matthew spends every other weekend and a month during summer vacation with his father. They go fishing in Mexico, take trips to the beach and play tennis together as often as possible.

Peter is a natural athlete with a splendid physique. He says he stays in shape by playing at it as opposed to working at it. He quit exercising at a gym in favor of tennis, swimming and hiking.

The NBC-TV series runs 52 weeks a year without hiatus. When Peter feels the need of a vacation he is written out of the script for a few weeks.

THERE ARE occasional days when Peter isn't in the story. He takes advantage of these breaks to go out to dinner with Jean or invite friends to stop by for a barbecue.

Jean does most of the cooking for the two of them. But when they entertain Peter frequently prepares Mexican dishes, at which he is expert.

Among his pals are George Peppard, Jim Brown, Mickey Callen and Jimmy Boyd. His closest friend is Playboy entrepreneur Hugh Hefner.

Several times a month Jean and Peter can be found at Hef's Playboy Mansion West for a new movie and dinner. They also enjoy swimming in Hefner's indoor pool. Usually they are home by 10 p.m.

Peter speaks Spanish well and loves Mexico. Before his acting career really got rolling he was befriended by a Mexican bullfighter who convinced him he should try his hand in the ring.

HE HAD 19 legitimate bullfights before retiring from the ring.

"I wanted to find out about myself," Peter says. "I had to know if I had the courage to get in the ring with a fighting bull and do the job. Once I'd satisfied myself, I thought I had nothing more to prove."

Peter recently bought a van, stocked it with stereo, a comfortable sofa and deep-sea fishing gear for his frequent trips south of the border.

Jean is crazy about pets. Peter isn't. Her two poodles live with a friend. But Jean gave Matthew two canaries and there is a tankful of tropical fresh water fish in the house.

'Hotlips' is really quite a beauty

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — One of life's minor tragedies is Loretta Swit's image as Hotlips Hoolihan on television's "M*A*S*H" series.

Loretta is seen in shapeless army fatigues in a Korean field hospital, her hair often bedraggled and her charms thoroughly and unconsciously covered.

It is this sort of image which gives female majors a bad name.

FOR ALL HER nickname of Hotlips, Maj. Margaret Hoolihan is a sexless Army nurse who arouses a handful of males only because she is the only game in camp as it were.

In truth, Loretta deserves an Emmy every day for best actress of the year for camouflaging her beauty.

Away from the set she is an alluring blonde with a dynamite figure and a lovely face. It takes an accomplished actress, hiding her own sex appeal, to play frumpy Hotlips week after week.

LORETTA CAN be seen in better circumstances in her new movie, "Race With the Devil" with Peter Fonda.

Better still, Loretta is putting together a nightclub act.

But it was Hotlips who brought Loretta to Hollywood's attention and established her in the minds of the American public.

"There's nothing like a hit television series to make everyone aware of you," Loretta said the other day.

"I GOT THE part because I'd played dramatic roles in almost every television show on the air. When a TV series is a success everyone in the industry is willing to give you employment because you proved you can handle a script and can act."

"By the end of the second season you are exposed to most of the people who can give you work. After that it's up to the actress to do what she can."

Loretta said she has hired the best help available

— agent, personal manager, publicist and business manager.

"Things open up," she went on. "At the end of the first year I did a movie, 'Freebie and the Bean.' And it made a difference."

"THE RECOGNITION progression was interesting. After the first year people came up to ask if I was that girl on 'M*A*S*H.' The second year they called me Hotlips. Now invariably they call me Loretta."

Television, Loretta believes, is the real salvation for actresses. The medium is far more woman-oriented than motion pictures where almost all the stars are men.

"There are too few Streisands and Ellen Burstyns," she said.

"Those two women are doing well because they have learned to compete the same way actors do — by forming their own companies and producing their own movies. They assemble their own films."

"IF ELLEN HADN'T put together 'Alice Doesn't Live Here Anymore,' there wouldn't have been any picture or an Academy Award for her."

"Men have traditionally made their own deals. The sooner women follow suit the better it will be."

"I'd never dreamed I would work in a television series. But I'm delighted I went ahead with 'M*A*S*H.' It makes a wonderful antiwar statement without shoving it down anyone's throat."

Be that as it may, "M*A*S*H" doesn't do much for femininity, especially when it comes to Loretta Swit.

Loretta, who has never been married, shrugs away the fact that she is not seen at her best on the show. The real Loretta will emerge when she makes her debut in a nightclub. Then watch out!

"Weinher Von Braun" As a young rocket enthusiast, Von Braun read a science fiction tale about a trip to the moon. "It fided me," he said, "with a romantic urge to soar through the heavens and explore the universe." His phenomenal career has spanned nearly every important breakthrough in space-age technology. A man who perfected a "wonder weapon" that could have won the war for Adolf Hitler and who is now what one fellow scientist called the greatest human element behind American's rocketry success. A controversial figure, Weinher Von Braun calls the exploration of space "mankind's last great adventure."

Black Knight
RESTAURANT &
COCKTAIL LOUNGE

Whether you choose King
Arthur's chopped sirloin or Gueni-vere's filet, you'll enjoy dining in the Old English atmosphere of the Black Knight.

The large continental menu offers a wide selection to choose from. Enjoy London broil, shish kabob, barbecue ribs, chicken in wine sauce, shrimp scampi or Alaskan king crab. On Thursday, Saturday and Sunday, prime rib is featured. You'll also find appetizers including onion rings, mushrooms, tomato bread and saganaki, Greek cheese flambeed at your table. There's also a long list of sandwiches to choose from at the Black Knight. For dessert, try the Black Knight hot liqueured coffee topped with whipped cream and cherry.

Entertainment is featured seven nights a week for your pleasure. Monday through Friday from 11 a.m. until 2 p.m., a fashion show is presented.

Reservations are recommended at night. Restaurant hours are from 11:30 a.m. until 1 a.m. Sunday through Thursday and from 11:30 a.m. until 2 a.m. Friday and Saturday. The bar is open from 11:30 a.m. until 3 a.m. every night.

The Black Knight is located at 152 W. Higgins Road in Hoffman Estates.

Greco's classic bishop sacrifice more than 3 centuries old

No attacking idea is more basic than the so-called Greco's sacrifice, which is first found in Greco's own chess handbook published in 1619.

The position as given by Greco himself (Diagram 1) White will sacrifice his bishop to expose black's king and then threat-

Chess club finishes second

The Arlington Heights Chess Club recently placed second in the Northwest Chicago Suburbs Chess League, said Dave Millson, a spokesman for the group.

Anyone interested in chess is invited to attend the weekly meetings of the club each Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. at Pioneer Park, 500 S. Fernandez.

For information, contact Millson, 398-8575.

on a winning checkmate with his queen and knight.

Our second diagram shows the position after 1. BxP check, KxB; (Diagram 2) 2. N-N5 check, K-N1; 3. Q-R5, and there is no defense to mate via 3... R-K1; 4. Q-R7 check, K-B1; and 5. Q-R8 mate or 3... BxN; 4. PxB, P-B3; 5. P-N6 and 6. Q-R8 mate is inevitable.

Nor does an attempt to vary on move two with ... K-N5 or ... K-R3 save the game, as the reader can readily convince himself.

BUT OUR first example of Greco's sacrifice is absolute simplicity compared to what can happen. For the winning variations were "forced," i.e., easy to calculate to conclusion.

Recently the young Yugoslavian Baile had a much more difficult judgment to make in his game against International Master Raicevic, in the recent Yugoslavian championship. Should (Diagram 3) he or shouldn't he try the classic sally? Is it justified in this particular position?

Baile acted forthrightly, sacrificed the bishop and won forcefully, as we can see from our final position, in which black resigned. The (Diagram 4) latter's king has been driven far afield and there is no defense (1. Q-B5 check, K-Q3; 2. N-N5 check, K-K2; 3. R-K1 and it's over).

The fact remains that Baile's sacrifice was substantially less than our first example. There were many more possibilities from sacrifice to conclusion.

Was it sound? Here are the moves from Diagram Three to Diagram Four: 1. BxP check, KxB; 2. N-N5 check, K-R3; 3. Q-Q3, BxN; 4. PxB check, KxP; 5. P-K4, K-B3; 6. O-O-O; P-B5; 7. Q-N3, R-K1; 8. R-R7, K-K3; 9. PxP check, K-Q2; 10. Q-N4 check, K-Q3; 11. Q-B4 check, K-Q2; resigns.

Play through and analyze some of the possibilities to see whether the sacrifice was sound.

Win at bridge

Moyes has faith in 4-3 trump fit

The late Sonny Moyes, who edited the Bridge World magazine for many years, used to do a lot of writing about a 4-3 trump fit. He discussed this so much that these 4-3 fits are frequently called Moyesian fits in his honor.

Sonny sat North. His favorite partner, the late Albert Morehead, South.

They were using weak jump overcalls so Morehead elected to make a takeout double in spite of the singleton heart.

As you can see the hand will make three notrump because each defender holds four clubs. It won't make five diamonds because East holds three diamonds and only two spades. Will it make four spades?

Sonny gave Al a chance to try. His raise to three was based partly on his theory about 4-3 fits and partly because he had great faith in his partner's dummy playing ability.

Al didn't disappoint him. He made the four-spade contract with no trouble at all.

He ruffed the third club, led a trump to dummy's queen and a second trump back to his ace. Then he started to run diamonds. He didn't really care about who held the last two trumps. Someone could ruff, but that one ruff would be the last trick for the defense.

Actually, West ruffed as soon as he could and led a fourth club. Al ruffed in dummy, came in his hand with the ace of hearts, drew the last trump and claimed.

Cool off with concerts by the lake

The 14th annual series of summertime Lakeside Promenade Concerts presented by the Chicago Chamber Orchestra, Dieter Kolber conducting, at the Museum of Science and Industry will get under way Sunday, May 18, at 3:30 p.m.

The concerts are given in an outdoor setting at the lagoon promenade bordering the museum's south portico. In the event of inclement weather, the programs will be moved into the museum's air-conditioned auditorium.

Additional Sunday concerts in the series are slated for May 25, June 1, 8, and 15. Admission to the museum and to the concerts is free.

For the season's opener, the program will consist of "Music for Winds," Charles Gounod's "Petite Symphonie" is the first work. This will be followed by W.A. Mozart's "Divertimento in E flat Major, K. Anh. 226," Franz Schubert's "Six minuets," Ezra Laderman's "Octet," and Richard Strauss's "Serenade, Op. 7."

The programs are presented by the Chicago Park District and the Chicago Chamber Orchestra Assn. in cooperation with the Museum of Science and Industry. They are made possible by memberships and voluntary contributions, aided by a grant from the Recording Industry's Performance Trust Funds in cooperation with the Chicago Federation of Musicians.

The museum, 57th Street and Lake Shore Drive, is open daily from 9:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m.

Wisconsin town rallies to save historic church

MONROE, Wis. (UPI) — Residents of this small Green County community, which contends to be the Swiss cheese capital of the United States, have banded together to save a century-old church that has been put on the auction block.

The Monroe Arts and Activities Center Inc. was formed several months ago when it was learned that the old Methodist Church, which was built in 1869, was going to be sold. It had not been used as a church by Methodists since 1970 and they finally decided to sell it.

The church is a stately edifice of yellow Milwaukee brick with a tall spire that can be seen for miles. It was designed by E. Townsend Mix, a well-known architect of that period from Milwaukee, and is listed on the National Register of Historic Places. It could also become part of a proposed "Heritage Trail" in Wisconsin.

THE FOUNDER of MAAC is Mrs. Frank Stiles, wife of a pediatrician who said she got involved because "I've always felt it was a beautiful building."

Mrs. Stiles said she got a phone call last summer from a New Glarus woman who said the church is for sale and would be taken down. That was enough to get her going.

"Well," she said, "I told her I had nothing else to do and that I would be delighted to do whatever I could. I never thought it would be this much work but I'm sure it will be successful."

The group needs $30,000 in seed money to attract grants from the government and from private groups like the Ford Foundation and has already raised $15,000. A total of $100,000 is needed to buy the edifice.

CONTRIBUTIONS include a $1,000 gift from a local music teacher who hopes the church, which has fine acoustics, will be used in the future for recitals.

Mrs. Stiles said the residents in this 9,000-member community are meeting the challenge of raising the $30,000.

"We have gotten a lot of strong support from our local community," she said. "The people are responding magnificently even though it's tax time — a lousy time to raise money."

The group has a deadline of July 1 to raise the $100,000 and Mrs. Stiles says "I'm sure we'll make it."

Because the church is listed on the National Register of Historic Places, it is eligible for some grants and the group is investigating other ways to raise the necessary capital.

IF THE GROUP is successful in raising the money the church would not only be preserved as a historical landmark and a chunk of the area's history but could also be used as a community center, Mrs. Stiles said.

She said it could be used for musical events, meetings of local groups, educational purposes and "to just encourage the creative talents of people. It would give us all a lift."

And give Monroe something besides Swiss Cheese to be famous for.

A second home in Vail? Here's how you can afford it

by United Press International

A beach home in Florida or Hawaii, ski chalet in Colorado or Vermont, a mountain retreat...

Sounds like the glamorous life of a jet setter, but it could be the coming thing for middle-class Americans if time-sharing, a new trend in the second-home industry, catches on.

Time-sharing is a concept of resort condominium ownership in which an individual acquires rights to use of a unit for a specified period of time each year, either through purchase, long-term lease, vacation license or club membership.

A CONCEPT widely used in European resort developments for many years, time-sharing has just recently made its appearance in this country as resort condominium developers sought solutions to marketing problems posed by the inflationary-recessionary economy.

It is a concept not without its pitfalls for both the developer and purchaser, but one which seems likely to gain popular acceptance once the many intricacies are worked out.

Steven L. Ingleby, a condominium consultant with Keith Romney Associates, Salt Lake City, and Alyce Boyster, an associate analyst in the San Francisco office of Real Estate Research Corp., examined the time-sharing principle in articles for Real Estate Review, considering the pros and cons for both developers and purchasers.

MRS. BOYSTER noted time-sharing developed in this country as a by-product of the resort condominium when it became evident the cost-per-day expense of these units is extremely high considering most families can make only limited use of a vacation home.

Alternatives included the rental condominium, which seeks to offset some of the cost by rental to transients when the owner is not in residence and through tax benefits, and multiple ownership, in which two or more families join in purchase. Both have drawbacks, however. Rentals are subject to fluctuation, the tax shelter benefits are under scrutiny and multiple ownership leaves co-owners responsible if one owner fails to uphold his financial commitment.

Time-sharing costs are low, usually under $10,000, liability is limited and the owner can enjoy all the privileges of vacation home ownership for a period of time generally approximating the use he would receive from full ownership.

INGLEBY CITED recent studies which, he said, indicate 30 to 40 per cent of resort condo purchasers have household incomes of more than $50,000 a year. Less than one per cent of American households, however, earn that much. Although the higher income purchaser also has been the main market for time-sharing so far, the relatively small investment required—roughly comparable to a new automobile or a swimming pool—make middle-income, younger consumers a likely market.

Ingleby outlined advantages of time-share ownership. A major factor, he suggested, is flexibility. By paying only for the actual use he will make of a unit, a purchaser may be able to afford more than one time-sharing interest in a variety of locations. Through such ownership a buyer can be assured of a guaranteed reservation at the resort of his choice year after year. To an extent, he is purchasing future vacations at today's prices.

Unit owners, he noted, frequently number between five and 50 persons. Occupancy periods usually run from one to six weeks in length. Under the usual fee simple purchase, buyers may sell, convey and devise their interest freely.

THERE ARE OBVIOUS problems to be worked out in time-sharing—most of them in the development end. For the purchaser, assurance of on-going, quality management of the project would seem to be his biggest concern.

A prime factor in any condominium purchase, it becomes more so where perhaps thousands of individuals are involved, where during the season there is virtually 100 per cent occupancy of each unit by several different owners. Without professional management to ensure routine cleaning and maintenance, in the manner of hotel management, the project could deteriorate rapidly.

Both Ms. Boyster and Ingleby see time-sharing as a viable concept. With increased understanding on both sides, they feel, the developer should be able to produce a better product, and consumer acceptance create an active market demand.

Steam engines chug at Brookfield

The steam and diesel engines begin running this week at Brookfield Zoo.

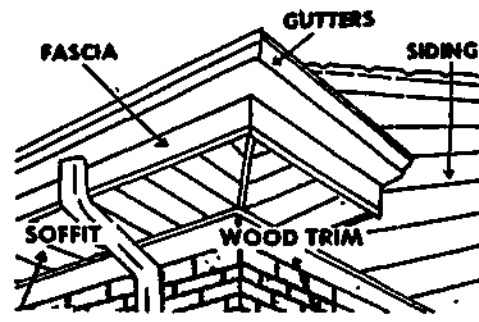

Rudy, the diesel replica, will pull passengers through Brookfield Zoo's 200 acres during the week. Brookfield Zoo's 57-year-old narrow-gauge steam engine, Granny, and Blue Goose, her younger counterpart, will pull passengers on the weekends.

Summer hours at Brookfield will go into effect this weekend when the 6 p.m. closing time will be extended an hour. The zoo, which is located off the Eisenhower and Stevenson expressways on First Avenue at 31st Street, will be open daily from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Windfall!

Most say they won't 'splurge'

SHARON GILES

IRWIN KURZIN

A Herald staff report

Conservative and thrifty, the people of the Northwest suburbs will spend their government rebate checks, coming this week, on their homes, their children and ways to save for a rainy day.

A sidewalk poll of Northwest suburbanites Friday reveals that far from pouring rebate money into "big-ticket" items such as cars, most people will take their rebate check and use it quietly. Some said they would use their rebate money on home improvements or a vacation. Others said they would try to save the government windfall.

At least most people said that was their plan. One man, Charles Keagy of Rolling Meadows, says he expects to get $100 back in his rebate and will "double the money playing poker."

THE FIRST BATCH of rebate checks, ranging from $100 to $200 for most taxpayers, went into the mail Thursday in the Chicago area. The Internal Revenue Service said the rebates would be sent on a "first-come, first-served" basis, the first set going to people who filed tax returns by Feb. 13. People expecting a refund from the IRS will get it in a separate check.

"We just bought a house. So we can use the rebate for paint, carpeting and everything," said Paula Springer of Arlington Heights.

Mrs. William Schwenk of Palatine also plans to use the extra money on the house. "We've got to paint the house this year and do some other things around here that we had to let go because we couldn't afford it," she said.

ANN NOWICKI of Wheeling said she will use the rebate to help her son buy a house. Sharon Giles of Schaumburg said she will spend it on air conditioning. Sharon Jacoby of Des Plaines will fence-in her backyard with the rebate and Mrs. Robert Munson of Elk Grove Village said she'll use it to put a roof over a balcony.

Mrs. John Pawley of Elk Grove Village will put the money towards sails for her sailboat. Thomas Rentoules of Des Plaines will use the money for extra spending on a summer trip to Greece.

Other people like Irwin Kurzin of

BARBARA BUEDEL

Wheeling said they were going to spend the money but didn't know on what. "We'll spend it, though, and get the economy going," he said.

Barbara Buedel of Wood Dale said she had already spent the money even though she hasn't gotten the check in the mail yet.

GOVERNMENT officials hope people will funnel their rebates back into the economy by buying consumer goods instead of using the money for bills and savings, but not everyone intends to oblige.

"We'll just save it," said Bruce Thill of Mount Prospect. "The rebate may help the economy some but for the individual it won't mean much. You can't do that much with $100 to $200 these days."

Mrs. John Wetzel of Elk Grove Village said she is depending on the rebate check to buy plants and seeds for her vegetable garden so she can feed her family for the rest of the year.

KEN KLEIN of Arlington Heights plans to pay his dentist bill with his rebate and Don Cerny of Schaumburg said he will use the extra money for

"CHIEF BILL" RITTER

'Once a chief, always
a chief?' Well, ask Bill

Crossing guard, 74, getting a new
'birthday star' from Buffalo Grove

by JILL BETNER

Chief Ritter, put your stars back on. Have your best uniform cleaned and pressed. After more than 30 years of volunteer duty, you're finally going to get a real policeman's star from the Village of Buffalo Grove just in time for your 74th birthday.

Won't the kids be proud — all those boys and girls who run to see you very day at your crossing guard's post under the old hickory tree across from Buffalo Grove High School?

They know Ritter as "Bill" or "Mr. Ritter," the guy who always seems to be cheerful even on the gloomiest old days, who loves to joke and tease and hands out lollipops on Halloween.

WHAT ALMOST nobody knows is that "Mr. Ritter" is actually Chief Ritter — former chief, that is — of the Paterson, N.J., Auxiliary Police.

Ritter took off his chief's stars when he retired two years ago and moved to Buffalo Grove where he and his wife, Nellie, now live with their son William Jr.'s family.

But Ritter said he couldn't give up police work just like that, not after working his way up from patrolman in the Paterson reserve police department in 1941 to chief with 35 men under his command three decades later.

Ritter began listening in on police calls on a monitor he rigged up with his citizens' band radio, but couldn't stay away from the police station very long.

A FEW MONTHS after he arrived in the village, Ritter dropped in on Buffalo Grove Police Chief Harry Walsh to chat about some of his experiences in New Jersey. Walsh put him to work and every school day since, Ritter has been at his post — loving every minute.

"There's just something about police work — it gets in your blood," Ritter said. "Why did I do it all those years without being paid? I guess you could say I like community relations because that's people and I really do love people."

And people, from the littlest tykes who go to Longfellow School to the high school kids and the school-bus drivers love Ritter right back.

WALSH HAS BEEN urging Ritter to put his stars back on his uniform for some time.

"He keeps telling me 'once a general, always a general,' and he used to call me 'chief' all the time, but I was kind of embarrassed, so now he always calls me 'Tex,'" Ritter said.

Ritter still carries his New Jersey auxiliary police chief's shield in his wallet, along with a marksmanship medal and another for his 30 years of service with the department. Besides his police work, Ritter also donated countless hours during 25 years in volunteer duties at a Paterson hospital.

Somehow, he managed to find time for a paying job as a truck driver.

Divers recover one body

2 youths drown in Des Plaines River

Fire department scuba divers pulled the body of Jesse Kurup, 18 from the Des Plaines River Friday night but were unable to find the body of a teen-aged girl, also feared drowned.

Authorities said Kurup and Theresa Swiatek, 17, both of Chicago, fell into the river between Devon Avenue and Higgins Road earlier Friday while trying to cross a dam with three other friends. They lost their footing, fell in and were swept away by swift current caused by recent flooding in the area.

Fire department divers from Arlington Heights, Mount Prospect and several other towns searched into the night for the bodies of Miss Swiatek, 5754 W. Montrose Ave., and Kurup, 2838 N. Hamlin Ave.

Two friends, Steven Gurak and Susan Casablanca, dove in to try to save the pair but were unsuccessful, said Sgt. Richard Dreihobl, director of Rosemont Public Safety Dept. Warren Davies, Morton Grove, witnessed the accident and attempted to help the young people in rescue efforts, Dreihobl said.

Authorities said the strength of the water current near the dam made it difficult for scuba divers to search the bottom of the river.

The search for Miss Swiatek's body was expected to resume today.

Easement OKd for Mill-River connector street

The city has been given an easement for the proposed connector road between Mill and River streets.

The easement granting permission to construct a connector was recorded with the county April 18.

The easement was granted by Barney Franzen for a 14-foot right-of-way along the eastern portion of his property at 1702 Mill Street.

THE CITY COUNCIL killed a move by Ald. Thomas Koplos, 1st, and Ald. Joseph Szabo, 1st, to give Mayor Herbert H. Behrel the authority to negotiate for the remainder of the needed right-of-way with the Moehling family.

A number of aldermen were angered by the move. They said that the city council had been informed that the easement granted by the Franzens, who are selling their property to Harmony Builders for a condominium apartment building, would be used for a water main.

The proposal to build a street to connect Mill and River streets has been the center of some controversy for several months.

City Atty. Charles Hug said Friday that the agreement granting the easement was signed April 17. He said the document specifically allows construction of the street.

HUG SAID THE easement was required by the city as a condition for the developers to obtain a building permit. While Paul Kron of Harmony Builders has been willing to give the city the necessary right-of-way, the Moehlings who own a smaller parcel abutting Kron's on River Street, have indicated they want to be compensated for the land.

Initial plans for the street called for it to be constructed midway in the block between River Road and the Forest Preserve District property which is the eastern boundary of both streets.

However Szabo and Koplos opposed the plan and urged the street be built at the end of the block. The controversy flared when a large number of residents on the two streets submitted a petition to the city council, protesting plans for the street.

Ald. Richard Ward, 8th, chairman of the city council's streets and traffic committee, said he was a little surprised by Szabo's request to proceed with efforts to acquire the necessary right-of-way. He said Friday that he was unaware the easement granted by Franzen specifically allowed construction of the street.

HUG SAID WHILE the normal width of a street is 66 feet, the 14 feet would allow for construction of a one-way street with no sidewalk or parkway.

The initial plans for the street were developed at the same time the city was attempting to convince state officials to build an overpass to carry River Road over the Chicago and North Western Ry. tracks and Miner Street. Those plans were stalled when the Forest Preserve District refused to give up land it owned along River Road for the necessary right-of-way.

The connector street would have been necessary, because the proposed overpass would have blocked Mill Street to River Road.

Topping out the shelter at Hillcrest Slough are Bill Esser and Richard Schuld.

by LEA TONKIN
The land is soggy, an open wetland area that somehow escaped the relentless push of surrounding development.

It is the Hillcrest Slough on Ill. Rte. 83, Prospect Heights. The small pocket of nature holds the promise of outdoor enjoyment and education for Northwest suburban residents. To the 16 determined members of the Prospect Chapter of the Izaak Walton League and their volunteer assistants, it is a center of activity as the construction of a nature shelter reaches the final stage.

"We're putting the roof on now. We're hoping for completion by the end of the month," said Richard Schuld of Prospect Heights, president of the Izaak Walton League chapter. The 20-foot-by-30-foot shelter has been in the works for two years, Schuld said. When it is completed, the shelter will offer two fireplaces and picnic areas to visitors. The shelter is built on property owned by the Prospect Heights Park District that extends 200 by 300 feet. Condemnation proceedings have begun for several surrounding acres.

"THERE IS not only a need for the center, but part of our concern is for the area," Schuld said. "Many areas are being filled in for development. This not only is a retention area but it is a refuge. It's one of the last wetlands in the area."

"You can find raccoon, fish, Canadian geese, turtles, frogs, you name it," he said of the park area. "We wish it was more desolate but it's enjoyable."

The open-air nature center will be opened to the public later in the spring, climaxing a construction program that has attracted the support of many community organizations. "We're small, and we're tackling an ambitious project," Schuld said.

The nature-shelter project, valued at more than $11,000, has drained the Prospect chapter's funds. The group is about $2,500 in the hole. "There are more things we'd like to do there with a couple of thousand dollars more in improvements," Schuld said. Donations and volunteer help have enabled the group to move ahead with the construction program. "But we're always looking for donations," Schuld said.

Windfall!

Most say they won't 'splurge'

SHARON GILES

IRWIN KURZIN

A Herald staff report

Conservative and thrifty, the people of the Northwest suburbs will spend their government rebate checks, coming this week, on their homes, their children and ways to save for a rainy day.

A sidewalk poll of Northwest suburbanites Friday reveals that far from pouring rebate money into "big-ticket" items such as cars, most people will take their rebate check and use it quietly. Some said they would use their rebate money on home improvements or a vacation. Others said they would try to save the government windfall.

At least most people said that was their plan. One man, Charles Keagy of Rolling Meadows, says he expects to get $100 back in his rebate and will "double the money playing poker."

THE FIRST BATCH of rebate checks, ranging from $100 to $200 for most taxpayers, went into the mail Thursday in the Chicago area. The Internal Revenue Service said the rebates would be sent on a "first-come, first-served" basis, the first set going to people who filed tax returns by Feb. 13. People expecting a refund from the IRS will get it in a separate check.

"We just bought a house. So we can use the rebate for paint, carpeting and everything," said Paula Springer of Arlington Heights.

Mrs. William Schwenk of Palatine also plans to use the extra money on the house. "We've got to paint the house this year and do some other things around here that we had to let go because we couldn't afford it," she said.

ANN NOWICKI of Wheeling said she will use the rebate to help her son buy a house. Sharon Giles of Schaumburg said she will spend it on air conditioning. Sharon Jacoby of Des Plaines will fence-in her backyard with the rebate and Mrs. Robert Munson of Elk Grove Village said she'll use it to put a roof over a balcony.

Mrs. John Pawley of Elk Grove Village will put the money towards sails for her sailboat. Thomas Rentoules of Des Plaines will use the money for extra spending on a summer trip to Greece.

Other people like Irwin Kurzin of

BARBARA BUEDEL

Wheeling said they were going to spend the money but didn't know on what. "We'll spend it, though, and get the economy going," he said.

Barbara Buedel of Wood Dale said she had already spent the money even though she hasn't gotten the check in the mail yet.

GOVERNMENT officials hope people will funnel their rebates back into the economy by buying consumer goods instead of using the money for bills and savings, but not everyone intends to oblige.

"We'll just save it," said Bruce Thill of Mount Prospect. "The rebate may help the economy some but for the individual it won't mean much. You can't do that much with $100 to $200 these days."

Mrs. John Wetzel of Elk Grove Village said she is depending on the rebate check to buy plants and seeds for her vegetable garden so she can feed her family for the rest of the year.

KEN KLEIN of Arlington Heights plans to pay his dentist bill with his rebate and Don Cerny of Schaumburg said he will use the extra money for

"CHIEF BILL" RITTER

'Once a chief, always
a chief?' Well, ask Bill

Crossing guard, 74, getting a new
'birthday star' from Buffalo Grove

by JILL BETTNER

Chief Ritter, put your stars back on. Have your best uniform cleaned and pressed. After more than 30 years of volunteer duty, you're finally going to get a real policeman's star from the Village of Buffalo Grove just in time for your 74th birthday.

Won't the kids be proud — all those boys and girls who run to see you very day at your crossing guard's post under the old hickory tree across from Buffalo Grove High School?

They know Ritter as "Bill" or "Mr. Ritter," the guy who always seems to be cheerful even on the gloomiest old days, who loves to joke and tease and hands out lollipops on Halloween.

WHAT ALMOST nobody knows is that "Mr. Ritter" is actually Chief Ritter — former chief, that is — of the Paterson, N.J., Auxiliary Police.

Ritter took off his chief's stars when he retired two years ago and moved to Buffalo Grove where he and his wife, Nellie, now live with their son William Jr.'s family.

But Ritter said he couldn't give up police work just like that, not after working his way up from patrolman in the Paterson reserve police department in 1941 to chief with 35 men under his command three decades later.

Ritter began listening in on police calls on a monitor he rigged up with his citizens' band radio, but couldn't stay away from the police station very long.

A FEW MONTHS after he arrived in the village, Ritter dropped in on Buffalo Grove Police Chief Harry Walsh to chat about some of his experiences in New Jersey. Walsh put him to work and every school day since, Ritter has been at his post — loving every minute.

"There's just something about police work — it gets in your blood," Ritter said. "Why did I do it all those years without being paid? I guess you could say I like community relations because that's people and I really do love people."

And people, from the littlest tykes who go to Longfellow School to the high school kids and the school-bus drivers love Ritter right back.

WALSH HAS BEEN urging Ritter to put his stars back on his uniform for some time.

"He keeps telling me 'once a general, always a general,' and he used to call me 'chief' all the time, but I was kind of embarrassed, so now he always calls me 'Tex,'" Ritter said.

Ritter still carries his New Jersey auxiliary police chief's shield in his wallet, along with a marksmanship medal and another for his 30 years of service with the department. Besides his police work, Ritter also donated countless hours during 25 years in volunteer duties at a Paterson hospital.

Somehow, he managed to find time for a paying job as a truck

Divers recover one body

2 youths drown in Des Plaines River

Fire department scuba divers pulled the body of Jesse Kurup, 18 from the Des Plaines River Friday night but were unable to find the body of a teen-aged girl, also feared drowned.

Authorities said Kurup and Theresa Swiatek, 17, both of Chicago, fell into the river between Devon Avenue and Higgins Road earlier Friday while trying to cross a dam with three other friends. They lost their footing, fell in and were swept away by swift current caused by recent flooding in the area.

Fire department divers from Arlington Heights, Mount Prospect and several other towns searched into

the night for the bodies of Miss Swiatek, 5754 W. Montrose Ave., and Kurup, 2838 N. Hamlin Ave.

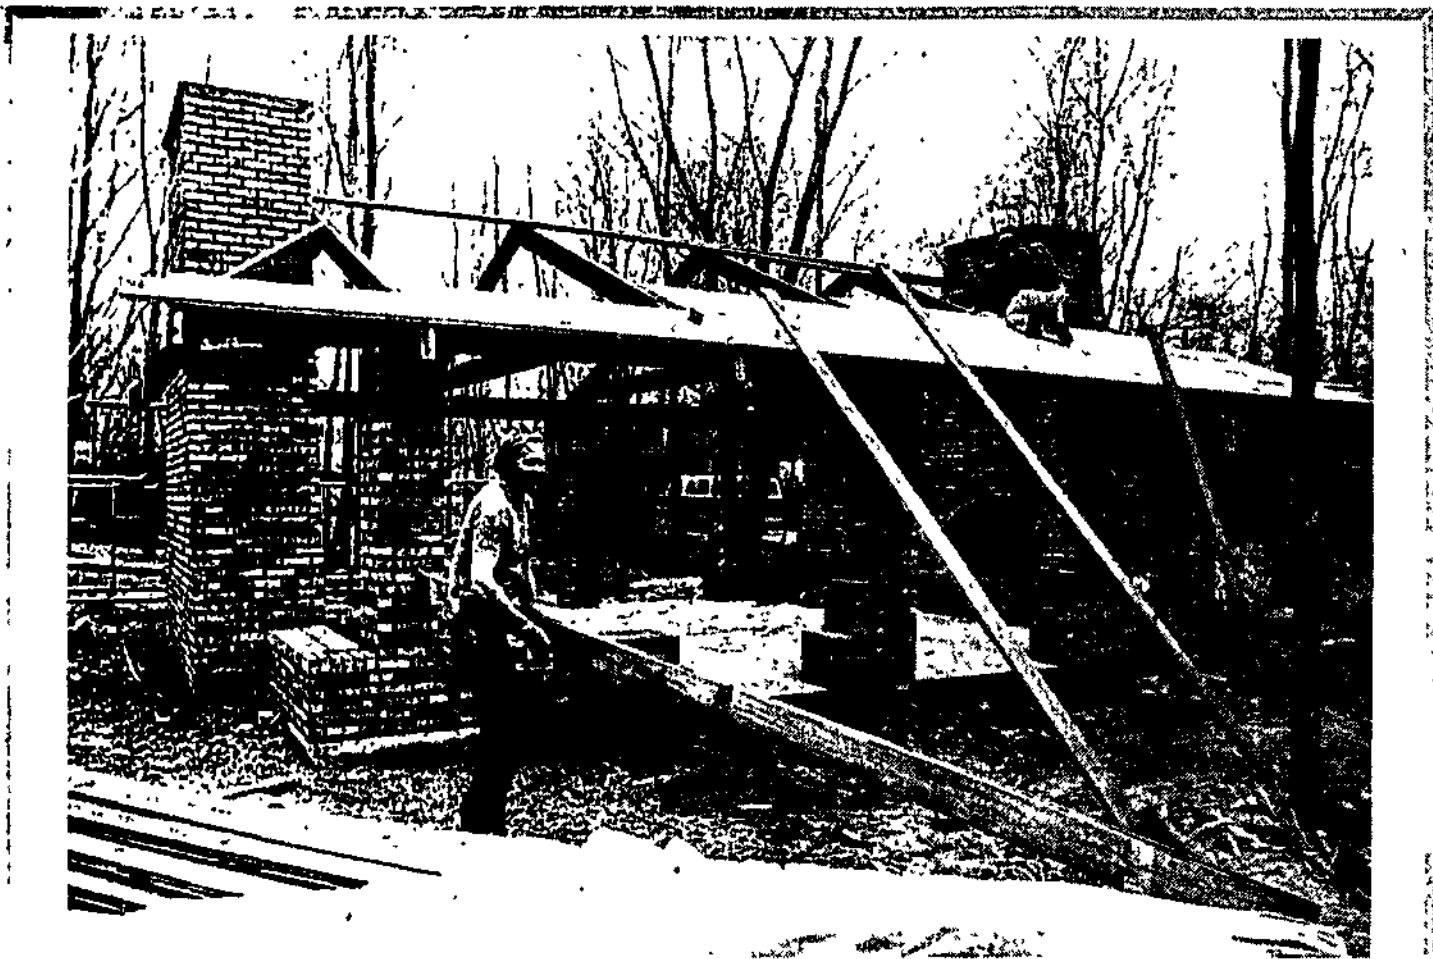

Two friends, Steven Gurak and Susan Casablanca, dove in to try to save the pair but were unsuccessful, said Sgt. Richard Drehschl, director of Rosemont Public Safety Dept. Warren Davies, Morton Grove, witnessed the accident and attempted to help the young people in rescue efforts, Drehschl said.

Authorities said the strength of the water current near the dam made it difficult for scuba divers to search the bottom of the river.

The search for Miss Swiatek's body was expected to resume today.

Topping out the shelter at Hillcrest Slough are Bill Esser and Richard Schuld.

by LEA TONKIN

The land is soggy, an open wetland area that somehow escaped the relentless push of surrounding development.

It is the Hillcrest Slough on Ill. Rte. 81, Prospect Heights. The small pocket of nature holds the promise of outdoor enjoyment and education for Northwest suburban residents. To the 16 determined members of the Prospect Chapter of the Izaak Walton League and their volunteer assistants, it is a center of activity as the construction of a nature shelter reaches the final stage.

"We're putting the roof on now. We're hoping for completion by the end of the month," said Richard Schuld of Prospect Heights, president of the Izaak Walton League chapter. The 20-foot-by-30-foot shelter has been in the works for two years, Schuld said. When it is completed, the shelter will offer two fireplaces and picnic areas to visitors. The shelter is built on property owned by the Prospect Heights Park District that extends 200 by 300 feet. Condominium proceedings have begun for several surrounding acres.

"THERE IS not only a need for the center, but part of our concern is for the area," Schuld said. "Many areas are being filled in for development. This not only is a retention area but it is a refuge. It's one of the last wetlands in the area."

"You can find raccoon, fish, Canadian geese, turtles, frogs, you name it," he said of the park area. "We wish it was more desolate but it's enjoyable."

The open-air nature center will be opened to the public later in the spring, climaxing a construction program that has attracted the support of many community organizations. "We're small, and we're tackling an ambitious project," Schuld said.

The nature-shelter project, valued at more than $11,000, has drained the Prospect chapter's funds. The group is about $2,500 in the hole. "There are more things we'd like to do there with a couple of thousand dollars more in improvements," Schuld said. Donations and volunteer help have enabled the group to move ahead with the construction program. "But we're always looking for donations," Schuld said.

Northbrook plan reviewer named building chief

by LYNN ASINOF

Walter Repholz, 55, a plan reviewer with the Village of Northbrook, has been named Wheeling's building director, filling a post that has been vacant nearly a year-and-a-half.

Village Mgr. George Passolt Friday said Repholz will receive an annual salary of $20,000 and is scheduled to begin work June 2.

"I hope after he gets his feet wet it will make it a little easier for me," Passolt said.

REP HOLZ WILL fill the vacancy created in February 1974 when William Bieber resigned after pleading guilty to federal charges of extortion, conspiracy, perjury and filing a false income tax return in a zoning shake-down scheme. In addition to his building director duties, Bieber also was director of zoning.

Passolt said Repholz will have no zoning responsibilities. The manager said it is not known if Repholz's appointment will mean a reorganization of the building department.

Robert Kaminski, village electrical inspector, has been serving as acting building director since Bieber's resignation. He will resume his activities as an inspector.

"We feel most fortunate to have someone of Mr. Kaminski's capabilities to have handled the job in the interim period," Passolt said.

PASSOLT HAS been criticized for failing to name a building director sooner. He said Friday that some of the delay resulted from a board request that Repholz be interviewed by a consulting firm doing a study on the village. The study was ordered as a result of the indictment and conviction of Bieber and three other former village and township officials.

In addition, Passolt said the board wanted to be able to review the consulting firm's report. He said by the time the report was completed, it was almost time for a new village board to be sworn into office.

The Herald discloses that Passolt consulted with the new village board on the matter at an executive session Monday night, where he reportedly provided information on other applicants for the job.

PRIOR TO his employment in Northbrook, Repholz was the head of the Highland Park building department and worked three years as a building inspector. Passolt said Repholz has more than 23 years experience in the construction industry, and said he was hired because of his "qualifications."

Repholz, a Round Lake resident, Friday said he is "looking forward to filling the position."

Correction

The Herald reported incorrectly Friday that the Wheeling-Buffalo Grove Dist. 21 Board of Education is considering a 1975 fall referendum to drop an annual $8 book-rental fee. The district is considering a referendum in the near future that would abolish the $8 book fee beginning in the fall of 1978.

Sanitary district offers free sludge

The Prospect Heights Old Town Sanitary District has 20 cubic yards of treated, refined sludge to give away.

Richard Schuld of the district said the sludge is in demand as a fertilizer. It is supplied by the Metropolitan Sanitary District from its Stickney plant.

Schuld said the sludge is free to residents but donations for the Izaak Walton League will be accepted for the sludge.

The sludge can be picked up between 9 a.m. and 3 p.m. Monday through Friday at the rear of 4 N. Elmhurst Rd. Users must bring their own shovel and baskets, Schuld said.

2 youths drown in Des Plaines River

Fire department scuba divers pulled the body of Jesse Kurup, 18 from the Des Plaines River Friday night but were unable to find the body of a teen-aged girl, also feared drowned.

Authorities said Kurup and Theresa Swiatek, 17, both of Chicago, fell into the river between Devon Avenue and Higgins Road earlier Friday while trying to cross a dam with three other friends. They lost their footing, fell in and were swept away by swift current caused by recent flooding in the area.

Park officials, Jaycees to plan Willow Stream

by BETTY LEE

The Buffalo Grove Park District and Jaycees are expected to meet next week to plan the Jaycee development of Willow Stream Park.

Stanley Crosland, park director, said members of both parties will prepare for a meeting with residents living near the Willow Stream Park site who voiced concern over the project.

The Jaycees want to develop part of the park by installing playground equipment, a picnic pavilion and other recreational equipment. The project is estimated to cost the organization $37,000.

RESIDENTS LIVING nearby have expressed disenchantment with some of the plans, saying patrons entering and leaving the park site might interfere with the privacy of the neighborhood.

Residents complained that persons going to the park from the north and northwest will be tempted to cut through their property because the park site is enclosed on three sides.

They also said they were concerned about the type of playground equipment the Jaycees might choose. Another main concern of the neighborhood is to keep the area's natural habitat for the existing wildlife.

Crosland said the meeting early next week might include an inspection of the park site to resolve any problems with water and sewer drainage.

THE MEETING with residents probably will be scheduled in two weeks, Crosland said. A joint presentation will be made to the residents for approval of general plans and layouts, as well as the playground equipment selected.

Although there has been some talk among both parties of installing playground equipment during the first half of June, Crosland said he is doubtful the installation will be made.

"The site needs preparation," Crosland said. "There's grading and excavation. By the time we order the equipment from the manufacturer, it will be a month," he said, noting it was already the middle of May.

"MY IMPRESSION would be around July 1," he said.

Crosland said the Jaycees have done some preliminary preparation such as pruning bushes.

Some architectural, construction and other park preparation services will be donated by Jaycees whose professions are in those areas, Crosland said.

Correction

The Herald reported incorrectly Friday that the Wheeling-Buffalo Grove Dist. 21 Board of Education is considering a 1975 fall referendum to drop an annual $8 book-rental fee. The district is considering a referendum in the near future that would abolish the $8 book fee beginning in the fall of 1976.

Settani, Kiddle reelected to posts

Joseph P. Settani and William J. Kiddle Jr. have been reelected to top posts on the Buffalo Grove Park District Board.

Settani, a member of the board for the past four years, will serve another one-year term as president and Kiddle a one-year term as vice president.

Kiddle has served on the board since 1969 and was president for four years.

Appointments also were made during the election of officers this week. Joyce Johnson was reappointed secretary of the board and John Sullivan reappointed attorney. Byron F. Johnson was reappointed for a fourth term as treasurer.

The land is soggy, an open wetland area that somehow escaped the relentless push of surrounding development.

It is the Hillcrest Slough on Ill. Rte. 83, Prospect Heights. The small pocket of nature holds the promise of outdoor enjoyment and education for Northwest suburban residents. To the 16 determined members of the Prospect Chapter of the Izaak Walton League and their volunteer assistants, it is a center of activity as the construction of a nature shelter reaches the final stage.

"We're putting the roof on now. We're hoping for completion by the end of the month," said Richard Schuld of Prospect Heights, president of the Izaak Walton League chapter. The 20-foot-by-30-foot shelter has been in the works for two years, Schuld said. When it is completed, the shelter will offer two fireplaces and picnic areas to visitors. The shelter is built on property owned by the Prospect Heights Park District that extends 200 by 300 feet. Condemnation proceedings have begun for several surrounding acres.

"THERE IS not only a need for the center, but part of our concern is for the area," Schuld said. "Many areas are being filled in for development. This not only is a retention area but it is a refuge. It's one of the last wetlands in the area."

"You can find raccoon, fish, Canadian geese, turtles, frogs, you name it," he said of the park area. "We wish it was more desolate but it's enjoyable."

The open-air nature center will be opened to the public later in the spring, climaxing a construction program that has attracted the support of many community organizations. "We're small, and we're tackling an ambitious project," Schuld said.

The nature-shelter project, valued at more than $11,000, has drained the Prospect chapter's funds. The group is about $2,500 in the hole. "There are more things we'd like to do there with a couple of thousand dollars more in improvements," Schuld said. Donations and volunteer help have enabled the group to move ahead with the construction program. "But we're always looking for donations," Schuld said.

Windfall!

Most say they won't 'splurge'

SHARON GILES

IRWIN KURZIN

A Herald staff report

Conservative and thrifty, the people of the Northwest suburbs will spend their government rebate checks, coming this week, on their homes, their children and ways to save for a rainy day.

A sidewalk poll of Northwest suburbanites Friday reveals that far from pouring rebate money into "big-ticket" items such as cars, most people will take their rebate check and use it quietly. Some said they would use their rebate money on home improvements or a vacation. Others said they would try to save the government windfall.

At least most people said that was their plan. One man, Charles Keagy of Rolling Meadows, says he expects to get $100 back in his rebate and will "double the money playing poker."

THE FIRST BATCH of rebate checks, ranging from $100 to $200 for most taxpayers, went into the mail Thursday in the Chicago area. The Internal Revenue Service said the rebates would be sent on a "first-come, first-served" basis, the first set going to people who filed tax returns by Feb. 13. People expecting a refund from the IRS will get it in a separate check.

"We just bought a house. So we can use the rebate for paint, carpeting and everything," said Paula Springer of Arlington Heights.

Mrs. William Schwenk of Palatine also plans to use the extra money on the house. "We've got to paint the house this year and do some other things around here that we had to let go because we couldn't afford it," she said.

ANN NOWICKI of Wheeling said she will use the rebate to help her son buy a house. Sharon Giles of Schaumburg said she will spend it on air conditioning. Sharon Jacoby of Des Plaines will fence-in her backyard with the rebate and Mrs. Robert Munson of Elk Grove Village said she'll use it to put a roof over a balcony.

Mrs. John Pawley of Elk Grove Village will put the money towards sails for her sailboat. Thomas Rentoules of Des Plaines will use the money for extra spending on a summer trip to Greece.

Other people like Irwin Kurzin of Wheeling said they were going to spend the money but didn't know on what. "We'll spend it, though, and get the economy going," he said.

Barbara Buedel of Wood Dale said she had already spent the money even though she hasn't gotten the check in the mail yet.

GOVERNMENT officials hope people will funnel their rebates back into the economy by buying consumer goods instead of using the money for bills and savings, but not everyone intends to oblige.

"We'll just save it," said Bruce Thill of Mount Prospect. "The rebate may help the economy some but for the individual it won't mean much. You can't do that much with $100 to $200 these days."

Mrs. John Wetzel of Elk Grove Village said she is depending on the rebate check to buy plants and seeds for her vegetable garden so she can feed her family for the rest of the year.

"CHIEF BILL" RITTER

'Once a chief, always

Crossing guard, 74, getting a new
'birthday star' from Buffalo Grove

by JILL BETTNER

Chief Ritter, put your stars back on. Have your best uniform cleaned and pressed. After more than 30 years of volunteer duty, you're finally going to get a real policeman's star from the Village of Buffalo Grove just in time for your 74th birthday.

Won't the kids be proud — all those boys and girls who run to see you very day at your crossing guard's post under the old hickory tree across from Buffalo Grove High School?

They know Ritter as "Bill" or "Mr. Ritter," the guy who always seems to be cheerful even on the gloomiest old days, who loves to joke and tease and hands out lollipops on Halloween.

WHAT ALMOST nobody knows is that "Mr. Ritter" is actually Chief Ritter — former chief, that is — of the Paterson, N.J., Auxiliary Police.

Ritter took off his chief's stars when he retired two years ago and moved to Buffalo Grove where he and his wife, Nellie, now live with their son William Jr.'s family.

But Ritter said he couldn't give up police work just like that, not after working his way up from patrolman in the Paterson reserve police department in 1941 to chief with 35 men under his command three decades later.

Ritter began listening in on police calls on a monitor he rigged up with his citizens' band radio, but couldn't stay away from the police station very long.

A FEW MONTHS after he arrived in the village, Ritter dropped in on Buffalo Grove Police Chief Harry Walsh to chat about some of his experiences in New Jersey. Walsh put him to work and every school day since, Ritter has been at his post — loving every minute.

"There's just something about police work — it gets in your blood," Ritter said. "Why did I do it all those years without being paid? I guess you could say I like community relations because that's people and I really do love people."

And people, from the littlest tykes who go to Longfellow School to the high school kids and the school-bus drivers love Ritter right back.

WALSH HAS BEEN urging Ritter to put his stars back on his uniform for some time.

"He keeps telling me 'once a general, always a general,' and he used to call me 'chief' all the time, but I was kind of embarrassed, so now he always calls me 'Tex,'" Ritter said.

Ritter still carries his New Jersey auxiliary police chief's shield in his wallet, along with a marksmanship medal and another for his 30 years of service with the department. Besides his police work, Ritter also donated countless hours during 25 years in volunteer duties at a Paterson hospital.

Somehow, he managed to find time for a paying job as a truck

Divers recover one body

2 youths drown in Des Plaines River

Fire department scuba divers pulled the body of Jesse Kurup, 18 from the Des Plaines River Friday night but were unable to find the body of a teen-aged girl, also feared drowned.

Authorities said Kurup and Theresa Swiatek, 17, both of Chicago, fell into the river between Devon Avenue and Higgins Road earlier Friday while trying to cross a dam with three other friends. They lost their footing, fell in and were swept away by swift current caused by recent flooding in the area.

Fire department divers from Arlington Heights, Mount Prospect and several other towns searched into the night for the bodies of Miss Swiatek, 5754 W. Montrose Ave., and Kurup, 2838 N. Hamlin Ave.

Two friends, Steven Gurak and Susan Casablanca, dove in to try to save the pair but were unsuccessful, said Sgt. Richard Dreho, director of Rosemont Public Safety Dept. Warren Davies, Morton Grove, witnessed the accident and attempted to help the young people in rescue efforts, Dreho said.

Authorities said the strength of the water current near the dam made it difficult for scuba divers to search the bottom of the river.

The search for Miss Swiatek's body was expected to resume today.

Off-campus plan studied for 'problem' students

An off-campus program for students with behavioral problems is being considered by the High School Dist. 211 Board of Education.

The district-wide program, would be housed at The Bridge Youth Services Bureau in Palatine next year using Dist. 211 teachers and counselors on staff at The Bridge.

Teachers would offer the basic academic courses necessary for graduation from Dist. 211 and Bridge counselors would be on hand for individual, group or family counseling.

The program will be open to 20 students with emotional or behavioral problems including excessive truancies, aggressiveness or excessive failure.

In reviewing the program Thursday, Dist. 211 board members asked for a cost-per-student breakdown of all the programs offered in the district including the proposed off-campus program.

Board Pres. Robert Creek asked for the information "so we can come to grips with the costs and benefits and who is being treated how." He said he wanted to "examine this from a financial as well as an emotional as well as an educational viewpoint."

Board member Edward Perry questioned whether an outside agency should be brought into a school program since the Northwest Educational Cooperative already offers special education programs for Dist. 211 students. "I will object to interposing another organization over and above a cooperative to which we already belong," he said.

Women coaches seek same pay as males get

Women coaches in High School Dist. 211 are asking for the same pay as their male counterparts.

Coaches for boys' and girls' sports are now paid on separate scales. Carl Flaks, president of the Dist. 211 teachers association, said some of the coaches approached the union to ask for equal pay and the union's contract improvement committee has agreed to bargain for one schedule in salary negotiations with the board this year. The extracurricular pay for coaches consisted mainly of intramural sports and "play days" as an extension of the physical education program. More and more competitive sports programs are being offered for girls, a trend that is likely to continue, said Flaks.

Because the sports programs are being made equal, some of the coaches felt the pay should also be equal, he said.

of girls' sports this year ranges from $187 to $337 and the range for boys' sports is $337 to $785. The teachers are now asking that the sports be grouped together in one schedule with different levels for various coaching positions, said Flaks.

FACTORS THAT will affect extracurricular pay include length of the athletic season, the number of hours required for the coaching job and the "pressure factor" of performing before a crowd in spectator sports.

Flaks said the proposal "ruffled some feathers" of the male coaches but both the male and female coaches have now agreed to the proposed schedule.

Topping out the shelter at Hillcrest Slough are Bill Esser and Richard Schuld.

by LEA TONKIN

The land is soggy, an open wetland area that somehow escaped the relentless push of surrounding development.

It is the Hillcrest Slough on Ill. Rte. 83, Prospect Heights. The small pocket of nature holds the promise of outdoor enjoyment and education for Northwest suburban residents. To the 16 determined members of the Prospect Chapter of the Izaak Walton League and their volunteer assistants, it is a center of activity as the construction of a nature shelter reaches the final stage.

"We're putting the roof on now. We're hoping for completion by the end of the month," said Richard Schuld of Prospect Heights, president of the Izaak Walton League chapter. The 20-foot-by-30-foot shelter has been in the works for two years, Schuld said. When it is completed, the shelter will offer two dropplaces and picnic areas to visitors. The shelter is built on property owned by the Prospect Heights Park District that extends 200 by 300 feet. Condemnation proceedings have begun for several surrounding acres.

"THERE IS not only a need for the center, but part of our concern is for the area," Schuld said. "Many areas are being filled in for development. This not only is a retention area but it is a refuge. It's one of the last wetlands in the area."

"You can find raccoon, fish, Canadian geese, turtles, frogs, you name it," he said of the park area. "We wish it was more desolate but it's enjoyable."

The open-air nature center will be opened to the public later in the spring, climaxing a construction program that has attracted the support of many community organizations. "We're small, and we're tackling an ambitious project," Schuld said.

The nature-shelter project, valued at more than $11,000, has drained the Prospect chapter's funds. The group is about $2,500 in the hole. "There are more things we'd like to do there with a couple of thousand dollars more in improvements," Schuld said. Donations and volunteer help have enabled the group to move ahead with the construction program. "But we're always looking for donations," Schuld said.

Plum Grove parks to offer summer play

The Plum Grove Countryside Park District expects to offer residents a wide range of summer activities for the first time, most of them through a contract to be ratified this month with Salt Creek Park District.

The Countryside district will contract for use of the Salt Creek mobile recreation unit, including the services of instructors and art and craft materials, for two days per week. The contract cost is to be $390, James DeVos, Salt Creek park district director, said.

With the mobile unit, Plum Grove residents can participate in supervised tumbling, girls and boys softball, gymnastics, tennis lessons, arts and crafts and other programs, all to be offered at the Plum Grove park site. The programs are for children in kindergarten or older.

If enough parents are interested, the program will also include a tot lot period during the mornings.

There will be no fee to parents for any of the mobile unit programs, Pamela Dahl, Plum Grove district commissioner, said.

The Plum Grove district also is offering a swimming program for the first time, with the donation of time at the Kings Walk Apartments swimming pool, 4607 Kings Walk Dr. Three sessions of one hour per day, five mornings per week for a two-week period will start June 16. A registration fee of $7 per person will be charged to pay an instructor and life guard.

One session each will be devoted to beginners, intermediate and advanced swimmers. Registration forms will be included in a summer activities book to be distributed to residents by the first week in June.

DeVos said the Salt Creek district "needs more people participating in programs" and "welcomes" the agreement with the Countryside district. The Salt Creek board will vote on the agreement Tuesday. The Countryside board is to vote on the contract May 28, Mrs. Dahl said.

Restaurant dancing ban on way out

It's against the law to dance in an establishment serving liquor in Rolling Meadows, except in special circumstance. But that law may be on its way out.

Fishing equipment stolen from room

Fishing equipment, valued at $434, was stolen from a locked storage room at 1240 Elmhurst Rd., Mount Prospect, police said Friday.

The date of the theft is unknown, but police said the burglar had to have had a key to get into the storage room. Once inside, the burglar pried open the storage shelter used by Clifford Gronlund and stole the fishing equipment.

The city's police committee heard a request Thursday from Steve Kloutas, operator of The Atrium Restaurant, 3223 Algonquin Rd., for a change in liquor laws to permit restaurateurs to provide dance music for their patrons. Kloutas said a dancing floor would assist his business.

Kloutas had not even known dancing was against the law until after he published an advertisement inviting patrons to come and dance to music he would provide. But Police Chief Lewis R. Case noticed the ad and informed Kloutas of a liquor law ban on dancing.

THE ORDINANCE does provide for one-day dancing permits for such special occasions as wedding receptions.

The committee asked for an opinion from City Atty. Donald Rose on whether the city could allow dancing only on a limited basis in restaurants holding class AA liquor licenses. "The 'controlled allowance' was suggested by Ald Kenneth W. Retzke, 5th, who said Friday he sees no harm in dancing but hopes the city can relax the restriction over a period of years to see if there are any undesirable results.

Retzke said he was surprised the ordinance had not been challenged sooner in the city's 20-year history. If Rose says the city cannot limit the dance music privilege to only the top liquor license categories, the city probably will be forced to open the privilege to all licensees, rather than keeping the ban on all licensees, he said.

BUT RETZKE noted "we've only had one man come in in 20 years and ask us to allow it. I'm conservative. I just don't believe if one man comes and asks for it we should let all the bars down at once."

Retzke's views are not unanimous on the board. Ald Merrill A. Wuerch, 1st, who noted he and his wife enjoy dancing occasionally, said he "moved to completely strike the whole thing on dancing."

"I think it should be allowed. I don't see that much wrong with it one way or the other."

Ald William D. Ahrens, 2nd, once supported allowing a tavern in the city, which also would require a change in the laws. He had little comment on dancing, but said most communities have "obsolete" laws on the books.

Windfall!

Most say they won't 'splurge'

SHARON GILES

IRWIN KURZIN

A Herald staff report

Conservative and thrifty, the people of the Northwest suburbs will spend their government rebate checks, coming this week, on their homes, their children and ways to save for a rainy day.

A sidewalk poll of Northwest suburbanites Friday reveals that far from pouring rebate money into "big-ticket" items such as cars, most people will take their rebate check and use it quietly. Some said they would use their rebate money on home improvements or a vacation. Others said they would try to save the government windfall.

At least most people said that was their plan. One man, Charles Keagy of Rolling Meadows, says he expects to get $100 back in his rebate and will "double the money playing poker."

THE FIRST BATCH of rebate checks, ranging from $100 to $200 for most taxpayers, went into the mail Thursday in the Chicago area. The Internal Revenue Service said the rebates would be sent on a "first-come, first served" basis, the first set going to people who filed tax returns by Feb. 13. People expecting a refund from the IRS will get it in a separate check.

"We just bought a house. So we can use the rebate for paint, carpeting and everything," said Paula Springer of Arlington Heights.

Mrs. William Schwenk of Palatine also plans to use the extra money on the house. "We've got to paint the house this year and do some other things around here that we had to let go because we couldn't afford it," she said.

ANN NOWICKI of Wheeling said she will use the rebate to help her son buy a house. Sharon Giles of Schaumburg said she will spend it on air conditioning. Sharon Jacoby of Des Plaines will fence-in her backyard with the rebate and Mrs. Robert Munson of Elk Grove Village said she'll use it to put a roof over a balcony.

Mrs. John Pawley of Elk Grove Village will put the money towards sails for her sailboat. Thomas Rentoules of Des Plaines will use the money for extra spending on a summer trip to Greece.

Other people like Irwin Kurzin of

BARBARA BUEDEL

Wheeling said they were going to spend the money but didn't know on what. "We'll spend it, though, and get the economy going," he said.

Barbara Buedel of Wood Dale said she had already spent the money even though she hasn't gotten the check in the mail yet.

GOVERNMENT officials hope people will funnel their rebates back into the economy by buying consumer goods instead of using the money for bills and savings, but not everyone intends to oblige.

"We'll just save it," said Bruce Thill of Mount Prospect. "The rebate may help the economy some but for the individual it won't mean much. You can't do that much with $100 to $200 these days."

Mrs. John Wetzel of Elk Grove Village said she is depending on the rebate check to buy plants and seeds for her vegetable garden so she can feed her family for the rest of the year.

"CHIEF BILL" RITTER

'Once a chief, always
a chief?' Well, ask Bill

Crossing guard, 74, getting a new
'birthday star' from Buffalo Grove

by JILL BETTNER

Chief Ritter, put your stars back on. Have your best uniform cleaned and pressed. After more than 30 years of volunteer duty, you're finally going to get a real policeman's star from the Village of Buffalo Grove just in time for your 74th birthday.

Won't the kids be proud — all those boys and girls who run to see you very day at your crossing guard's post under the old hickory tree across from Buffalo Grove High School?

They know Ritter as "Bill" or "Mr. Ritter," the guy who always seems to be cheerful even on the gloomiest of days, who loves to joke and tease and hands out lollipops on Halloween.

WHAT ALMOST nobody knows is that "Mr. Ritter" is actually Chief Ritter — former chief, that is — of the Paterson, N.J., Auxiliary Police.

Ritter took off his chief's stars when he retired two years ago and moved to Buffalo Grove where he and his wife, Nellie, now live with their son William Jr.'s family.

But Ritter said he couldn't give up police work just like that, not after working his way up from patrolman in the Paterson reserve police department in 1941 to chief with 35 men under his command three decades later.

Ritter began listening in on police calls on a monitor he rigged up with his citizens' band radio, but couldn't stay away from the police station very long.

A FEW MONTHS after he arrived in the village, Ritter dropped in on Buffalo Grove Police Chief Harry Walsh to chat about some of his experiences in New Jersey. Walsh put him to work and every school day since, Ritter has been at his post — loving every minute.

"There's just something about police work — it gets in your blood," Ritter said. "Why did I do it all those years without being paid? I guess you could say I like community relations because that's people and I really do love people."

And people, from the littlest tykes who go to Longfellow School to the high school kids and the school-bus drivers love Ritter right back.

WALSH HAS BEEN urging Ritter to put his stars back on his uniform for some time.

"He keeps telling me 'once a general, always a general,' and he used to call me 'chief' all the time, but I was kind of embarrassed, so now he always calls me 'Tex,'" Ritter said.

Ritter still carries his New Jersey auxiliary police chief's shield in his wallet, along with a marksmanship medal and another for his 30 years of service with the department. Besides his police work, Ritter also donated countless hours during 25 years in volunteer duties at a Paterson hospital.

Somehow, he managed to find time for a paying job as a truck

Divers recover one body

2 youths drown in Des Plaines River

Fire department scuba divers pulled the body of Jesse Kurup, 18 from the Des Plaines River Friday night but were unable to find the body of a teen-aged girl, also feared drowned.

Authorities said Kurup and Theresa Swiatek, 17, both of Chicago, fell into the river between Devon Avenue and Higgins Road earlier Friday while trying to cross a dam with three other friends. They lost their footing, fell in and were swept away by swift current caused by recent flooding in the area.

Fire department divers from Arlington Heights, Mount Prospect and several other towns searched into the night for the bodies of Miss Swiatek, 5754 W. Montrose Ave., and Kurup, 2838 N. Hamlin Ave.

Two friends, Steven Gurak and Susan Casablanca, dove in to try to save the pair but were unsuccessful, said Sgt. Richard Drehoel, director of Rosemont Public Safety Dept. Warren Davies, Morton Grove, witnessed the accident and attempted to help the young people in rescue efforts, Drehoel said.

Authorities said the strength of the water current near the dam made it difficult for scuba divers to search the bottom of the river.

The search for Miss Swiatek's body was expected to resume today.

Palatine High to occupy new school in 1977

Palatine High School will close its doors at 150 E. Wood St. in 1977 and move to High School Dist. 211's new school in Palatine's Winston Park subdivision.

The board of education Thursday agreed to name the new school Palatine High School and officials said the old building will probably never reopen as a regular high school.

Palatine High School, built in 1929, is in need of costly repairs and remodeling.

AN ADMINISTRATIVE committee is now studying uses for the old school, including selling or renting the building to another community agency, making it into an alternate day school, an enrollment overload school or a vocational or continuing education center.

None of those alternatives includes reopening the building as a high school, Board Pres. Robert Creek said Thursday. After the board meeting Creek said he is "99 per cent sure" that when Palatine closes in 1977 the building will never be used by the district for the typical high school program.

The district will continue to study possible uses for the building for at least another year before the board decides the fate of the old school.

The new Palatine High School will open in 1977 on a 60-acre site on Rohlfing Road just north of Virginia Lake Elementary School.

The new school, which will cost about $16 million, was approved by voters in a bond referendum in 1970 and a second referendum last October. The capacity will be 2,500 students and it can be expanded to house 4,000 students.

THE NEW building is another milestone in the 100-year history of Palatine High School. Palatine, one of the first high schools in the suburban area, began as a two-year program in one room of a two-story grade school on the site where Wood School now stands, 50 E. Wood St., Palatine. The first students were graduated in 1877.

The school program moved to the present Wood School when it opened in 1914 and moved to the old Palatine High building in 1929. Additions to the old building were put on in 1933 and 1965.

Serio to get post on plan commission

John V. Serio Sr., the defeated Republican candidate to the Palatine Village Board, will be appointed to the plan commission Monday.

Village Pres. Wendell E. Jones, chairman of the 1975 GOP campaign, said Serio's appointment will be among several he recommends to bring Palatine's commissions and boards to full strength. He would not disclose the names of other appointees.

Serio will fill a vacancy on the nine-member board created by the resignation of Pete Nance.

Serio was appointed to the village's Flood and Clean Streams Committee in September and was criticized during the campaign for his poor attendance record.

Serio, 31, 321 S. Cedar St., is a marketing director with Singer.

Topping out the shelter at Hillcrest Slough are Bill Esser and Richard Schuld.

by LEA TONKIN

The land is soggy, an open wetland area that somehow escaped the relentless push of surrounding development.

It is the Hillcrest Slough on Ill. Rte. 83, Prospect Heights. The small pocket of nature holds the promise of outdoor enjoyment and education for Northwest suburban residents. To the 16 determined members of the Prospect Chapter of the Izaak Walton League and their volunteer assistants, it is a center of activity as the construction of a nature shelter reaches the final stage.

"We're putting the roof on now. We're hoping for completion by the end of the month," said Richard Schuld of Prospect Heights, president of the Izaak Walton League chapter. The 20-foot-by-30-foot shelter has been in the works for two years, Schuld said. When it is completed, the shelter will offer two fireplaces and picnic areas to visitors. The shelter is built on property owned by the Prospect Heights Park District that extends 200 by 300 feet. Condemnation proceedings have begun for several surrounding acres.

"THERE IS not only a need for the center, but part of our concern is for the area," Schuld said. "Many areas are being filled in for development. This not only is a retention area but it is a refuge. It's one of the last wetlands in the area."

"You can find raccoon, fish, Canadian geese, turtles, frogs, you name it," he said of the park area. "We wish it was more desolate but it's enjoyable."

The open-air nature center will be opened to the public later in the spring, climaxing a construction program that has attracted the support of many community organizations. "We're small, and we're tackling an ambitious project," Schuld said.

The nature-shelter project, valued at more than $11,000, has drained the Prospect chapter's funds. The group is about $2,500 in the hole. "There are more things we'd like to do there with a couple of thousand dollars more in improvements," Schuld said. Donations and volunteer help have enabled the group to move ahead with the construction program. "But we're always looking for donations," Schuld said.

Commission hearing on cop in crash postponed

The Palatine Police and Fire Commission postponed a decision Friday night on charges against Patrolman John M. Johnson pending a psychiatric examination and recommendation for treatment by two doctors.

Palatine Police Chief Jerry Bratcher charged Johnson, 24, with inattention to duty after an April 1 accident when Johnson's squad car allegedly struck an auto waiting for a traffic signal on Northwest Highway at Smith Street.

Johnson has been involved in four similar, "chargeable" auto accidents during the past two years, said Richard D. Thomas, Bratcher's attorney, who is also the assistant attorney for the Village of Arlington Heights.

Johnson's attorney, Arthur H. Zimmerman of Chicago, did not enter a plea for the patrolman. He explained that Johnson had been examined by an Elgin psychiatrist who has determined that Johnson's performance as a patrolman is being affected by a terminal medical condition that affects his four-year-old son.

The psychiatrist recommended that his "prognosis" of Johnson "is favorable," that Johnson should be retained as a police officer and that continued consultation will be proper treatment for the problem, Zimmerman said on behalf of the doctor who was not present at the hearing.

Paul W. Jung, commission chairman, requested that the Elgin psychiatrist and a second psychiatrist of Johnson's choice examine the patrolman and submit "thorough, written reports" on their opinions and recommendations for treatment to the commission within two weeks.

Jung adjourned the hearing to May 23 at 8 p.m. at the Palatine Dist. 15 building, 505 S. Quentin Rd.

Johnson has been relieved of duties that require him to operate a motor vehicle pending the commission's decision.

Village's oldest resident dies

Amanda Schoppe, Palatine's oldest resident whose 100th birthday was marked in October by a village proclamation, died Friday.

Village Pres. Wendell E. Jones proclaimed the week of her 100th birthday as Amanda Schoppe week in Palatine. She was born Oct. 13, 1874.

Mrs. Schoppe was a lifelong resident of Palatine who helped run the Schoppe General Store at Brockway and Slade streets until 13 years ago when it closed. Mrs. Schoppe married her late husband, Louis, June 28, 1894, two years after he and a relative opened the store.

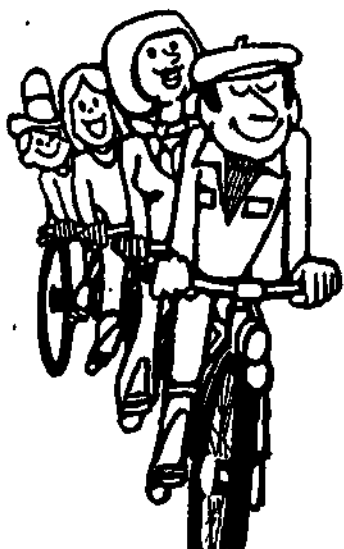

She was also an active member of the St. Paul United Church of Christ in Palatine and one of the oldest members of the Women's Relief Corps in the northwest suburban area. She spent most of her years living in a home at 44 S. Plum Grove Rd. where a niece now resides.

Mrs. Schoppe was known to drink a glass of wine each day "to keep her going" according to one of her nieces, Charlotte Meyer of Palatine. She spent much of her recent time playing bingo and bunco with her friends at the Plum Grove Nursing Home in Palatine where she has lived the past 3 1/2 years.

WALSH HAS BEEN urging Ritter to put his stars back on his uniform for some time.

"He keeps telling me 'once a general, always a general,' and he used to call me 'chief' all the time, but I was kind of embarrassed, so now he always calls me 'Tex,'" Ritter said.

Ritter still carries his New Jersey auxiliary police chief's shield in his wallet, along with a marksmanship medal and another for his 30 years of service with the department. Besides his police work, Ritter also donated countless hours during 25 years in volunteer duties at a Paterson hospital.

Topping out the shelter at Hillcrest Slough are Bill Esser and Richard Schuld.

by LEA TONKIN

The land is soggy, an open wetland area that somehow escaped the relentless push of surrounding development.

It is the Hillcrest Slough on Ill. Rte. 63, Prospect Heights. The small pocket of nature holds the promise of outdoor enjoyment and education for Northwest suburban residents. To the 16 determined members of the Prospect Chapter of the Izaak Walton League and their volunteer assistants, it is a center of activity as the construction of a nature shelter reaches the final stage.

"We're putting the roof on now. We're hoping for completion by the end of the month," said Richard Schuld of Prospect Heights, president of the Izaak Walton League chapter. The 20-foot-by-30-foot shelter has been in the works for two years, Schuld said. When it is completed, the shelter will offer two fireplaces and picnic areas to visitors. The shelter is built on property owned by the Prospect Heights Park District that extends 200 by 300 feet. Condemnation proceedings have begun for several surrounding acres.

"THERE IS not only a need for the center, but part of our concern is for the area," Schuld said. "Many areas are being filled in for development. This not only is a retention area but it is a refuge. It's one of the last wetlands in the area."

"You can find raccoon, fish, Canadian geese, turtles, frogs, you name it," he said of the park area. "We wish it was more desolate but it's enjoyable."

The open-air nature center will be opened to the public later in the spring, climaxing a construction program that has attracted the support of many community organizations. "We're small, and we're tackling an ambitious project," Schuld said.

The nature-shelter project, valued at more than $11,000, has drained the Prospect chapter's funds. The group is about $2,500 in the hole. "There are more things we'd like to do there with a couple of thousand dollars more in improvements," Schuld said. Donations and volunteer help have enabled the group to move ahead with the construction program. "But we're always looking for donations," Schuld said.

PHIA to probe chance of hiring county police

by TOM VON MALDER

The Prospect Heights Improvement Assn. will investigate the cost and what steps are necessary to have Wheeling Township hire off-duty Sheriff's policemen to provide extra patrol in Prospect Heights.

"The township can provide us with a contractual agreement with the county police," said Richard Wolf, newly elected PHIA president. He said that under the proposal which is to be studied, off-duty Sheriff's policemen would be hired and assigned to patrol the Prospect Heights area.

"The township could preferentially tax the unincorporated area to provide this service," Wolf said. His group first plans to study what type of police protection is needed, when the protection is needed, how many policemen would be required and how much the added protection would cost.

"WE WILL HAVE a ballot printed in the Town Bulletin before we enter any contracts or make a decision," Wolf said.

The investigation approach was decided on by the 150 to 200 persons who attended Thursday night's Prospect Heights annual town meeting at Hershey High School. Wolf said the decision was nearly unanimous.

"We all feel that police protection is one of the key issues in our community," Wolf said. "We want to be able to protect ourselves now and up to the point when we become incorporated." Once incorporated, he said, the community would be able to contract for police services directly without going through the township or even form its own police department, although that option is considered less likely for several years.

Other alternatives considered by those attending the town meeting were to lobby to get the township to use its existing funds, such as revenue sharing, to provide the protection; to collect voluntary contributions from residents to pay for added protection; and to ask the county to beef up its police protection of the area.

WOLF SAID Marshall Theroux, township assessor, told the group Wheeling Township has rejected the idea of using its revenue sharing funds in that manner. Efforts directed toward the county have failed in the past, Wolf added.

The idea of voluntary contributions was felt to be "ineffective," Wolf said.

Part of the police protection problem in the Prospect Heights area is that people are not reporting all the crime that goes on in the area, Wolf said. "We very strongly feel many people in our area are very apathetic in reporting crime," he said, adding that if more crimes were reported the Sheriff's Police would feel the area needs more protection and would assign additional policemen to patrol.

"We need to show increased need," Wolf said.

Also at the annual meeting, reports were given by the various PHIA committees, the Prospect Heights Library District, the Prospect Heights Park District, School Districts 23 and 214, Wheeling Township and an aide to State Rep. John Porter, R-Evanston.

Windfall!

*Most say they won't 'splurge'
with government rebate checks*

SHARON GILES

IRWIN KURZIN

A Herald staff report
Conservative and thrifty, the people of the Northwest suburbs will spend their government rebate checks, coming this week, on their homes, their children and ways to save for a rainy day.

A sidewalk poll of Northwest suburbanites Friday reveals that far from pouring rebate money into "big-ticket" items such as cars, most people will take their rebate check and use it quietly. Some said they would use their rebate money on home improvements or a vacation. Others said they would try to save the government windfall.

At least most people said that was their plans. One man, Charles Keagy of Rolling Meadows, says he expects to get $100 back in his rebate and will "double the money playing poker."

THE FIRST BATCH of rebate checks, ranging from $100 to $200 for most taxpayers, went into the mail Thursday in the Chicago area. The Internal Revenue Service said the rebates would be sent on a "first-come, first-served" basis, the first set going to people who filed tax returns by Feb. 13. People expecting a refund from the IRS will get it in a separate check.

"We just bought a house. So we can use the rebate for paint, carpeting and everything," said Paula Springer of Arlington Heights.

Mrs. William Schwenk of Palatine also plans to use the extra money on the house. "We've got to paint the house this year and do some other things around here that we had to let go because we couldn't afford it," she said.

ANN NOWICKI of Wheeling said she will use the rebate to help her son buy a house. Sharon Giles of Schaumburg said she will spend it on air conditioning. Sharon Jacoby of Des Plaines will fence-in her backyard with the rebate and Mrs. Robert Munson of Elk Grove Village said she'll use it to put a roof over a balcony.

Mrs. John Pawley of Elk Grove Village will put the money towards sails for her sailboat. Thomas Remondos of Des Plaines will use the money for extra spending on a summer trip to Greece.

Other people like Irwin Kurzin of

BARBARA BUEDEL

Wheeling said they were going to spend the money but didn't know or what. "We'll spend it, though, and get the economy going," he said.

Barbara Buedel of Wood Dale said she had already spent the money even though she hasn't gotten the check in the mail yet.

GOVERNMENT officials hope people will funnel their rebates back into the economy by buying consumer goods instead of using the money for bills and savings, but not everyone intends to oblige.

"We'll just save it," said Bruce Thill of Mount Prospect. "The rebate may help the economy some but for the individual it won't mean much. You can't do that much with $100 to $200 these days."

Mrs. John Wetzel of Elk Grove Village said she is depending on the rebate check to buy plants and seeds for her vegetable garden so she can feed her family for the rest of the year.

KEN KLEIN of Arlington Heights plans to pay his dentist bill with his rebate and Don Cerny of Schaumburg said he will use the extra money for

"CHIEF BILL" RITTER

'Once a chief, always
a chief?' Well, ask Bill

Crossing guard, 74, getting a new
'birthday star' from Buffalo Grove

by JILL BETTNER

Chief Ritter, put your stars back on. Have your best uniform cleaned and pressed. After more than 30 years of volunteer duty, you're finally going to get a real policeman's star from the Village of Buffalo Grove just in time for your 74th birthday.

Won't the kids be proud — all those boys and girls who run to see you very day at your crossing guard's post under the old hickory tree across from Buffalo Grove High School?

They know Ritter as "Bill" or "Mr. Ritter," the guy who always seems to be cheerful even on the gloomiest old days, who loves to joke and tease and hands out lollipops on Halloween.

WHAT ALMOST nobody knows is that "Mr. Ritter" is actually Chief Ritter — former chief, that is — of the Paterson, N.J., Auxiliary Police.

Ritter took off his chief's stars when he retired two years ago and moved to Buffalo Grove where he and his wife, Nellie, now live with their son William Jr.'s family.

But Ritter said he couldn't give up police work just like that, not after working his way up from patrolman in the Paterson reserve police department in 1941 to chief with 35 men under his command three decades later.

Ritter began listening in on police calls on a monitor he rigged up with his citizens' band radio, but couldn't stay away from the police station very long.

A FEW MONTHS after he arrived in the village, Ritter dropped in on Buffalo Grove Police Chief Harry Walsh to chat about some of his experiences in New Jersey. Walsh put him to work and every school day since, Ritter has been at his post — loving every minute.

"There's just something about police work — it gets in your blood," Ritter said. "Why did I do it all those years without being paid? I guess you could say I like community relations because that's people and I really do love people."

And people, from the littlest tykes who go to Longfellow School to the high school kids and the school-bus drivers love Ritter right back.

WALSH HAS BEEN urging Ritter to put his stars back on his uniform for some time.

"He keeps telling me 'once a general, always a general,' and he used to call me 'chief,' all the time, but I was kind of embarrassed, so now he always calls me 'Tex,'" Ritter said.

Ritter still carries his New Jersey auxiliary police chief's shield in his wallet, along with a marksmanship medal and another for his 30 years of service with the department. Besides his police work, Ritter also donated countless hours during 25 years in volunteer duties at a Paterson hospital.

Somehow, he managed to find time for a paying job as a truck driver.

Divers recover one body

2 youths drown in Des Plaines River

Fire department scuba divers pulled the body of Jesse Kurup, 18, from the Des Plaines River Friday night but were unable to find the body of a teen-aged girl, also feared drowned.

Authorities said Kurup and Theresa Swiatek, 17, both of Chicago, fell into the river between Devon Avenue and Higgins Road earlier Friday while trying to cross a dam with three other friends. They lost their footing, fell in and were swept away by swift current caused by recent flooding in the area.

Fire department divers from Arlington Heights, Mount Prospect and several other towns searched into the night for the bodies of Miss Swiatek, 5754 W. Montrose Ave., and Kurup, 2838 N. Hamlin Ave.

Two friends, Steven Gurak and Susan Casablanca, dove in to try to save the pair but were unsuccessful, said Sgt. Richard Drehoel, director of Rosemont Public Safety Dept. Warren Davies, Morton Grove, witnessed the accident and attempted to help the young people in rescue efforts, Drehoel said.

Authorities said the strength of the water current near the dam made it difficult for scuba divers to search the bottom of the river.

The search for Miss Swiatek's body was expected to resume today.

Schools may OK Suzuki string music program

by BOB GALLAS

A parent-run string instrument program in Arlington Heights Dist. 25 may be dropped in favor of a district-sponsored Suzuki string program.

The board of education has instructed the administration to investigate the cost of starting a Suzuki program and to report back to the board May 22.

The district operated a Suzuki program until several years ago, when it switched to the parent-run organization, "Music for Youth."

THE BOARD HEARD a report Thursday from the parent group, which expects a $2,300 deficit for the program for the present school year. The board voted to make up the deficit this year. The shortage of funds was attributed to the fact that about 50 of the 170 families in the program have not paid any fees.

Under state law, the parent-run program cannot require any fees, but may ask for "donations."

Board Pres. William Beck said he did not know whether the board favored returning to the Suzuki program, which emphasizes learning to play by ear before students learn to read music.

BECK SAID the board is concerned about the number of students that would sign up for such a program and the cost.

Beck said that while there are more than 170 students in the present program, the district had 700-800 students in its old Suzuki program.

"We have to make sure we can afford it. It makes no sense to do it one year then drop it," said Beck. Beck estimated a program for about 170 students would cost the district $25,000 to $35,000 per year.

IN OTHER ACTION, Thursday, the board approved the school calendar for the 1975-76 school year which begins the day after Labor Day, Sept. 2, for students and ends June 11. Both the first and last day of school will be shortened school days.

Two full weeks of Christmas vacation will run Dec. 19-Jan. 4 and Easter break will be April 15-25.

The board also voted to retain present textbook rental fees for the coming school year. The fees will remain at $5 for kindergarten and $11 for Grades 1 through 8.

The Arlington Heights Fire Prevention Bureau is mounting a campaign for villagewide numbering of houses.

Capt. Donald Hirth of the bureau said some houses in the village are not numbered and can result in unnecessary delays when emergency vehicles are trying to answer calls.

Village ordinance calls for all houses to have the numbers displayed on a contrasting background so they can be read easily from the street. The bureau has requested that numerals be used instead of spelling out the street number.

Hirth said the numbers should be at least four inches tall.

Firemen will be notifying residents in violation of the ordinance, Hirth said. Violators will be given 30 days in which to comply, he said.

The ordinance provides for fines of $5 per day for those not complying.

Correction

The Herald reported incorrectly Friday that the Wheeling-Buffalo Grove Dist. 21 Board of Education is considering a 1975 fall referendum to drop an annual $8 book-rental fee. The district is considering a referendum in the near future that would abolish the $8 book fee beginning in the fall of 1976.

Forest View band raising money for Alabama trip

Forest View High School Jazz Band members and boosters will sponsor a variety of fund-raising activities this month to send the band to the All-America Jazz Band Festival on Mobile, Ala.

The school band, on the basis of its competition record this year, will be one of eight performing at the festival, June 6 and 7.

The fund-raising activities, which will feature a combination car-wash-jazz concert, May 24, must raise $2,600, said Laurie Woolard, president of the Forest View High School Band Boosters.

The 22-member band, directed by Fred Elliot, qualified for the national festival by winning the Midwest Regional competition at Crown Point, Ind., in February.

THE BAND was invited to the Midwest competition after sweeping the four competitions it entered this year, said Elliot. The band took firsts at Augustana College in Rock Island, the University of Wisconsin at Whitewater, Eastern Illinois University, and Western Illinois University.

Elliot said the band will represent the Midwest at Mobile, along with bands representing other parts of the country. The Mobile performance is not competitive, he said.

Members of the jazz band and music boosters will hold car washes for the next three Saturdays at Ron's 68, Dempster Street and Elmhurst Rd. in Des Plaines. The band will perform at the May 24 car wash.

Those interested in accompanying the band to Alabama or in donating money are asked to call Mrs. Woolard at 297-8820.
